Pity the Poor Oyster
It Happened in Trees

—By Arthur Brisbane—

NEW YORK'S Interborough Rapid Transit Company, which operates subways, has gone into the hands of a receiver. Captain Kidd and the lesser pirates would pay a willing tribute to the manner in which high-minded American gentlemen-financiers have robbed, gutted, bedevilled and exploited that company and its stockholders.

Whoever was responsible for the management and mismanagement of that company, in the beginning, possesses a record of his own. The late George Harvey, once ambassador to England, knew some of the gentlemen that left large fortunes, based on New York street car robbery.

It amused him to tell how streaks of rusty rails were laid down on 34th st.'s level surface and charged to the company at a rate per mile higher than the cost of building a railroad over any part of the Rocky Mountains.

Moving pictures show strange things, elephants trumpeting, tails held straight up, crocodiles, hippopotami, scenes in the air, on land and water, ladies in pyjamas in "fashionable Long Island homes" or "Park avenue penthouses," gangsters killing each other, young ladies struggling to fame and glorification through the Follies.

Warner Brothers develop a new idea. They have produced a film telling how "life begins," showing one ward in a maternity hospital.

There is a lady from the night club not at all joyful when the doctor tells her: "Madam, the X-ray shows that you will have twins." She remarks, "That WOULD happen to me."

She decides to give the babies away, but after seeing them, she tells the lady who comes for them to "scram."

There is a poor, demented woman who steals a baby just born, and there is the young mother, innocent, of course, wrongly sentenced to life imprisonment, who is told by the doctors, "We can save your life or the life of your child, not both —choose." She insists that the baby shall be saved, that her husband may have a companion. In jail for life, she could be no companion to him.

The doctors obey her wishes, she dies, and the husband "carries on" wildly.

But that picture about life's beginning ought to be seen by husbands that go for a walk when their baby is born, and by those that oppose birth control in all cases.

Dr. Vera Koehring, of the Washington bureau of fisheries, says oysters suffer when the shells are opened violently. She advocates a law compelling the use of an anaesthetic, a little carbon dioxide, lactic acid or boric acid, to make the oysters sleep, with shells open.

The oyster's suffering, if it does suffer and knows that it suffers, would interest oyster men little. But Dr. Koehring adds that her method would make it possible to shuck oysters for about two cents a gallon, against the present price of 25 cents. That will interest the oyster man.

When men are more civilized they will forbid, without anaesthetics, the intensely painful operations performed on millions of young animals, with nervous systems, fully developed, young horses, lambs, pigs, calves. All the suffering of vivisection, for trapping, bull fighting are as nothing compared with the suffering inflicted upon young animals in the course of commercial stock raising.

Several thousand feet up on the Polish Carpathian Mountains a colony of 100, that included 13 doctors, organized an experiment in Communism, with what that colony called "free love" as a sideline. The idea was "by a novel experiment" to demonstrate important truths and prove the folly of our present marriage system.

Police locked up the 13 doctors and four women, scattered the rest. There was nothing novel about it. Such colonies existed a million years ago, in the tree tops. It was Communistic, because the nuts and fruits belonged to any monkey that could get them first, and the monkey ladies belonged to the monkeys that could get THEM first.

The real novelty is marriage, only a few thousand years old, and a wonderful training school for men, not yet good enough for it.

DOLE CHIEFS FACE FRAUD INQUIRY

Police Shift Probe to Welfare Department and Move in War Against Reds

Police officials, it was revealed today, are not only investigating fraud on the part of recipients of city aid but are making a direct investigation of the operations of the welfare department in connection with these cases.

The probe of the welfare department results, it is understood, from discovery of scores of dole faking in which even the most superficial investigation by welfare agents should have uncovered the fraud.

That the present police inspection of records on file at the welfare building is intended to go farther than a mere checkup to lay the foundation for court prosecution of dole "fakers" was learned exclusively by the Boston Evening American, which first exposed widespread racketeering in connection with public aid.

DOLE FOR THE DEAD

Finding of some families in which both husband and wife were on the city welfare list, receiving money regularly each week.

Discovery of dole recipients who are listed as receiving certain sums but who proved to police probers that they were getting smaller amounts.

Baring of numerous cases where nobody lives at the addresses listed at the welfare bureau, one instance being a South End address where the house listed has been vacant for two years.

POLICE FOIL SWINDLE FOR $80,000

McMurtry, Brighton Contractor, Is Saved Huge Sum in Arrest of N. Y. Suspect

What police believe to have been a scheme to swindle Frederick McMurtry, wealthy Brighton contractor, out of $80,000 or more, was nipped today through McMurtry's suspicions and capture of New York man who, police say, has a previous swindling record.

McMurtry a close friend of former Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, was even on the point of starting for Schenectady, N. Y., with the man now held, but the contractor's suspicions were aroused at the last moment.

NEGOTIATED FOR QUARRY

As a result, the New York man was arrested in the South Station by Inspectors George Augusta and Joseph Decker of the hotel squad.

McMurtry, who lives at 11 Henshaw st., Brighton, was approached first a number of days ago by the New York man who said his firm was interested in buying the quarry property owned by McMurtry off Washington st., near Lake st., Brighton.

The company, the man said he believed, would go as high as $80,000 for the property.

The men then went back to New York and returned yesterday when he told McMurtry arrangements were almost completed but that McMurtry would have to go with him to Schenectady to close the deal.

McMurtry agreed and said he and his lawyer would meet the man at the South Station last night. The man, however, said the lawyer would not be necessary.

GIVES FALSE ADDRESS

As the time for departure came, McMurtry's growing suspicion over that remark finally impelled him to report the negotiations to police, and the inspectors arrested the man, who gave a fictitious New York address.

Police believe the man and the two usual companions in such a game intended getting McMurtry to Schenectady and then work the swindle, which ordinarily starts with one of them stumbling across a wallet containing a considerable sum of money.

ROOSEVELT IN REPEAL PLEA

New York, Aug. 27 (INS)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will train his guns on President Hoover for the latter's stand on repeal of the eighteenth amendment when he addresses a Democratic rally at Seagirt, N. J., this afternoon.

It will be the Governor's second speech of his active campaign for the presidency and his advisers said he intended to deal "fearlessly and frankly" with prohibition.

Roosevelt is frankly disappointed because former Governor Alfred E. Smith will not be present at the New Jersey rally. When Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, Democratic chief of New Jersey, arranged for the rally several weeks ago it was with the understanding that it would be turned into a reconciliation meeting between "Frank and Al."

But Smith announced a few days ago he was not going, and with that announcement the hopes of the Democratic leaders for healing the breach between Roosevelt and Smith were lessened, at least for the time being.

STOCKS, COTTON AT NEW HIGHS

Stocks surged up $1 to more than $4 a share, with public utilities taking the lead. Trading again reached a feverish pace, with a turnover for the two-hour weekend session of about 2,000,000 shares.

Many issues reached new highs for the recovery. Some weekend profit-taking appeared, and some advances were substantially reduced, but the market as a whole maintained a strong tone.

Cotton had one of its most vigorous advances of the movement, reaching new high levels for more than a year, well above 9 cents a pound. Advances today exceeded ½ cent a pound, or $2.50 a bale, and carried prices up to levels 4 cents above the bottom of June.

Copper stocks held up well, American Smelting and Anaconda gaining $1 a share each to $21.25 and $12.25, respectively. Kennecott moved up $1.25 to $15.

GANG PHONES DEMAND FOR $15,000 IN RANSOM

Abductors Boldly Defy Police as American Learns That Revere Man Is Involved

EXCLUSIVE

(Copyright, 1932, for the Boston Evening American, and Associated Press.)

The Boston Evening American herewith prints exclusively the "inside story" of the audacious kidnaping of Maurice Goldbergh of Winthrop—the first Chicago-type "snatching" Greater Boston has ever had—and the brazen bargaining for ransom which was under way today.

The kidnapers, who yesterday, as revealed in the Boston Evening American, raised the ransom from $10,000 to $20,000 because of delay in meeting their demands, today rejected a flat offer of $7500 by Goldberg's relatives.

"CONSIDER" $15,000

The kidnap gang carried on their bargaining with little caution. They used the telephone, and the Boston Evening American is able to disclose that the call was from Chelsea to Goldberg's relatives in Brighton.

Scornfully ridiculing the offer of $1500, their spokesman conveyed the information that there was no chance in the world of cutting their demand to $10,000. But he promised to consider $15,000.

Discussion then took place regarding who should act as go-between to pay the ransom and receive Goldberg for his family. Once more the kidnapers were stubborn. They refused to agree to the man mentioned by their victim's friends.

While these bold negotiations were going on—with the family still meeting police questions with adamant silence—the Boston Evening American learned that Goldberg is held prisoner either in Revere or West Everett.

IS WELL TREATED

The kidnap "mob" did not even try to cover themselves by making their telephone negotiations for ransom from some point on the other side of the city.

The victim is being treated well and is being attended with every

Nineteen children, a man suffering from pneumonia and a woman overcome by smoke were carried from their homes early today during four fires in Roxbury, South Boston and Malden.

When flames of suspicious origin caused $2500 damage to the dwelling at 44 Orchard st., Roxbury, William H. Stevens of 39 Orchard st., who discovered the fire, made three trips into a burning attic, despite the handicap of a wooden leg, and carried to safety the six children of Mrs. Gertrude Smith.

It was the second time in six months he distinguished himself by a fire rescue. His wooden leg was scorched by the flames.

SICK MAN, GIRL SAVED

From the same house, Patrolmen John C. Murphy and John Riley carried Joseph Toner, 38, suffering from pneumonia, and his daughter, Ruth, 10.

The fire is being investigated by Inspectors Louis Cohen and Harry Schnider.

The South Boston fire was at 1 Washington ave. Patrolman Alexander J. Mahoney forced an entrance and rescued Mrs. Sabina Mangiatordi, who was overcome, and her two children. His shouts aroused Mr. and Mrs. Veto De Noia and their two children who fled. Mahoney was cut by glass.

In Malden there were two fires, the first in the home of Harry Crager in Suffolk st. A blaze that started under the front piazza spread through the lower floor and Crager carried his five children to safety.

In Malden st., Michael J. Driscoll was assisted by neighbors in rescuing his five small children after they had been nearly overcome by smoke from a fire in an attic closet.

Washington, Aug. 27 (US)—Mr. Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, and the most important man in the English financial world, occupies a unique position not only in the economics but in the politics of his country.

It is of course unobjectionable for Mr. Norman to visit this country; but when he comes secretly and mysteriously and under the assumed name of Prof. Clarence Skinner, it is evident that he not only wants to conceal his visit but the objects of it.

HARD TIMES PROLONGED BY G. O. P., GARNER SAYS

TARIFF AND DRY LAW ATTACKED BY SPEAKER

Hoover Administration "Parson-Pedagogue-Pied Piper" Policies Are Scored

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—With the last of the formal acceptances on the record and Speaker John Nance Garner assailing what he termed the "failure of Republican leadership," the Democrats today were ready for action on all fronts.

The Garner acceptance of the vice-presidential nomination set a new low record in the matter of expense. Senator Alben W. Barkley, temporary chairman of the national convention, sent a letter from Washington in which he praised the Speaker highly, and Garner answered in another letter dated from his home at Uvalde, Tex.

It had been estimated the notification would cost six cents, but the expense was a trifle more because of postage on copies sent to the national committee, which released them here.

TARIFF AND DRY LAW

Mr. Garner assailed the Hawley-Smoot tariff as causing a great decline in trade, and attacked what he called the steady encroachment of the federal government on the rights and duties of the states.

Regarding prohibition, he said that unlike the Republican plank, the Democratic plank made no attempt to be equivocal.

"No other constructive solution of the problems of the Eighteenth Amendment brought upon the country has been offered," he said. "Return of control and supervision to the states, where it rightfully belongs, should be welcomed by all who realize the growth of the evils which followed placing of this power in the hands of the Federal government."

Concerning the aims of government, he said:

"It is not the business of government to make individuals rich, though too often has government been bent to that purpose. Nor is it a function of an administration to direct the personal affairs of mankind, except insofar as it places a bar against such things as involve injury, loss or discomfort on others.

"U. S. NOT A PARSON"

"I have ever been of the belief that attempting to enforce morals by law was as unjustifiable an invasion of the field preempted by the churches and schools as putting the government into business is a violation of the nation's industrial and commercial fabric.

"Government is not a pedagogue nor a parson nor a pied piper; it is merely a convenience of civilization by which a set of rules is enforced on a community in the interest of order and justice.

"The failure to meet the depression emergency courageously at its inception and enactment of the Hawley-Smoot tariff in the face of an almost universal protest are, to my mind, the most naked evidences of the failure of the Republican leadership to realize its responsibilities and live up to its obligations."

AGAINST DEBT CANCELLING

Declaring the major causes of the "distress which prevails" can be found "in the record of national legislation and in the nationwide policies for which the Republican leaders are wholly responsible, Garner went on to say:

"Charges of demagogy emanating from the White House greeted every effort to enact a bill that would meet the credit and employment needs of the country.

"With regard to the foreign debt," he said, "I fully subscribe to the Democratic platform's statement. I oppose cancellation."

Praising Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for "courage, humanity and skill in government," he pledged himself "to do my utmost to the limit of my capacity."

LAST HOPE DIM FOR SEA FLIERS

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 27—Today wore on without relief to the anxiety felt for the missing Atlantic fliers, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Bochron, from Barre, Vt., unreported since they hopped at 6:02 a. m. (E. D. T.) Thursday from Harbor Grace, N. F.

But airports continued their vigil, especially along the coast. Authorities held a fading hope the fliers might have landed in some isolated spot.

However, if they flew continuously, their fuel could not have lasted beyond 8 o'clock, Eastern daylight time, last night.

It was feared they had been forced down at sea, and the only hope was rescue by a passing ship.

Mollison Set for Hop to Newfoundland Today

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—Capt. James A. Mollison, the Scottish flier, planned to take off today on the first leg of his return flight to England if weather conditions permit.

He expected to fly to St. John, N. B., and then to Harbor Grace, N. F. The flight across the Atlantic will not begin until Sunday at the earliest, he said.

Analysis of Nation-wide Poll By Hearst Newspapers on Presidential Candidates

Washington, Aug. 27 (US)—The following tabulation shows the political party division of voters in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. Those under the Republican headings voted Republican and those under the Democratic headings voted Democratic in 1928. The non-committal columns represent those who failed to designate on their poll ballot cards their stand four years ago.

HOOVER LOSING HEAVILY IN GRAIN BELT

43 Per Cent of 1928 Backers Swing to Roosevelt, Poll Reveals

EXCLUSIVE

By COLE E. MORGAN

Washington, Aug. 27 (US)—A defection from President Hoover of 43 per cent of his 1928 supporters in the eight states of the Middle West grain belt was indicated today in an analysis of returns in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in cooperation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

In Wisconsin and the two Dakotas the defection shown by the poll ballot cards is so great that Governor Roosevelt's gain to his credit more 1928 Republicans than has the President. In Nebraska and Minnesota the Democratic nominee is drawing four out of nine who voted for Hoover four years ago. The apportionment in Iowa is 10 to 7. It is only in Kansas and Missouri that Hoover is shown holding better than two-thirds of his former support.

While Roosevelt is making these tremendous inroads in the grain country, he is holding his own party's ranks practically unbroken, the returns showing 96 per cent for the 1928 Democrats staying with him.

For the country as a whole, with 57,892 Republicans of 1928 represented, Roosevelt has to his credit 39 per cent of his rival's former backers. Of the 35,087 Democrats of four years ago recorded, 95 per cent are staying with Roosevelt this year.

MINERS PLAN NEW DRIVE

Disregarding warning of Franklin County authorities that no invasion would be tolerated, the miners' central policy committee here said bases would be established soon near the "war area," where about 15,000 strikers were repelled by gunfire and clubs Wednesday night.

The committee stated several thousand men would advance into the territory in attempts through peaceful picketing to dissuade miners from working under the new $5 wage agreement. Strikers claimed units from unions in Kentucky, Indiana and Oklahoma would join the movement.

Girl Dead After Car Hits Tree

Eileen O'Brien, 17, of 27 Parker st., Charlestown, died at the State Infirmary, Tewksbury, early today, a few hours after she had been injured in an auto crash in Glen rd., Wilmington.

A car in which she was riding with John Harrington of 8 North Mead st., Charlestown, hit a stone in the road, swerved off the highway and crashed head on into a tree.

Both Miss O'Brien and Harrington were hurled headlong from the car but the man was uninjured. The girl suffered a fractured skull.

SEN. WATERMAN DIES AT CAPITAL

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Charles Winfield Waterman, United States senator from Colorado, died here early today after a long illness.

Sen. Waterman

Waterman, a Republican, was just completing a six-year term in the Senate which began March 4, 1927. He was 71 years old and had no children.

The senator had been in ill-health for over two years but until recently kept to his duties. He was a member of five committees of the Senate: Judiciary, naval affairs, patents, privileges and elections and enrolled bills.

Waterman was born in Vermont, attended school there and graduated from the University of Vermont. After three years of school teaching, he took his law degree from the University of Michigan in 1889 and moved to Denver to practice law.

He was elected to the Senate over five other candidates. His service would have ended March 3, 1933.

Tunney Sails Home to Enter Campaign

Mrs. Tunney, who recently submitted to an operation on the ear, is in much better health.

If You're Too Fat Then Just Toe In

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—Too fat? Maybe a tip from New York's finest will help. Chief Inspector John O'Brien says policemen here, to avoid waistlapels, are taught to stand with feet slightly toed in and hands behind the back.

This posture, he says, calls the abdominal muscles into play.

FORMER LYNN MAN SUICIDE

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 27 (AP)—Theodore F. Peavear, 52, socially prominent business man, formerly of Lynn, Mass., today shot and killed himself in the garden of his home.

Although Mrs. Peavear said she could not explain the act, Coroner David H. Atwater, a long-time friend of Peaver, said he believed financial trouble was the reason.

Peavear was born in Lynn and came here 22 years ago from Providence, R. I. He was connected with several clothing concerns and for a year managed the Sagamore Hotel here.

Sarnoff-Irving Hat Stores Go Bankrupt

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today in behalf of the Sarnoff-Irving Hat Stores, Inc., which conducts 121 stores in New York and "other cities" not named in the petition. Liabilities are listed at $528,621 and assets, book value, at $1,121,013.

ROPER HITS DRY AID TO HOOVER

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Open advocacy of President Hoover's reelection by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the allied forces for Prohibition, is considered "destructive" to the dry cause by Daniel C. Roper, internal revenue commissioner in the Wilson administration.

He so advised Dr. Poling today in a letter of protest withdrawing from membership in the organization.

"When you commit the allied forces, as an organization, to a Presidential candidate in this campaign," Roper said, "you thereby work an irreparable damage to the temperance cause.

"Nothing can be more destructive to it than to make it a football between the two major political parties. This you have deliberately done."

PEACE NEAR IN FARM STRIKE

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Aug. 27 (AP)—Peace settled on the Council Bluffs and Sioux City sectors of the farmers' war for higher prices today.

Picketing continued on three of the four main highways leading into Council Bluffs, Sheriff P. A. Laibson reported, but was without violence of any kind. The strike movement was "fading out," he said.

A settlement of the milk price war at Sioux City relieved the existing tension. An agreement was signed to give producers $1.80 per 100 weight for their product. The previous top was $1.40.

Immediately afterward the producers agreed to lift their attempted blockade of the city.

Threats of picketing at Shenandoah vanished when holiday leaders agreed with business men and produce dealers to use raffle as a persuasion campaign for the movement.

The blockade was lifted at the Nebraska end of the Interstate bridge leading into Yankton, S. D. South Dakota holiday supporters agreed to start a nonselling campaign Sept. 5 if other state organizations agreed.

Dolly Gann Lauds Hoover's Leadership

Oakland, Me., Aug. 27 (AP)—Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of Vice-President Curtis, first of the Republican party "big guns" to be tossed into the Maine State election fight, in a speech prepared for delivery at a rally here today called on the voters to decide whether "to stand by things fundamental and permanent" or to yield to "bold experimentation."

She said President Hoover was the only leader to arise out of the depression and praised him for his proposals for reconstruction.

COURT DECISION NEAR READY IN WALKER CASE

Ruling on Roosevelt's Jurisdiction to Be Made Early Next Week

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 27 (INS)—With the Mayor Walker removal hearing in adjournment until Monday night, Supreme Court Justice Ellia J. Staley today was putting the finishing touches on his decision on a petition asking that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt be restrained from acting in the case.

Staley is expected to announce his decision within 48 hours. Arguments were heard last Monday when John J. Curtin, counsel for Walker, contended Roosevelt had no legal or constitutional authority to remove Walker.

In the event of an adverse ruling by Staley, Curtin is expected to appeal to the appelate division, if necessary to the state court of appeals and perhaps finally to the United States Supreme Court.

HEARING NEARS END

The removal hearing before Roosevelt, in progress since August 11, is expected to end next week.

Today Roosevelt was at Sea Girt, N. J., to deliver a presidential campaign speech. Walker was back in New York city and Samuel Seabury, the mayor's accuser, at his home at East Hampton, L. I.

Walker's counsel expressed belief they had scored heavily in myriad the charges of Seabury that the missing Russell T. Sherwood was Walker's financial agent and that the mayor caused nearly $1,000,000 to be banked by Sherwood in a camouflaged account.

HOFSTADTER CALLED

The defense vigorously disputed the claim that Sherwood's deposits represented Walker's money. Forsyth Sherwood handled the special banking account of Senator George Blauvelt, who died in 1924, and continued the account in his own name. Curtin stressed the fact that Sherwood was handling financial matters for a number of prominent persons and therefore was well able to have large bank accounts of his own.

As a parting shot the defense called Senator Samuel H. Hofstadter, chairman of the legislative investigating committee, to the stand. Hofstadter, a Republican, admitted the committee never authorized Seabury to file the 15 charges with the Governor against the mayor. The committee, Hofstadter said, is to report its findings to the Legislature.

Band Hails Walker in N. Y. as Seabury Grins

PROBE OF MAINE SLAVE RING

Department of justice agents today began an investigation into an alleged vice ring which has operated for months between Maine and large eastern cities.

The probe resulted from the story told by Rose Rol, 21 of Biddeford, Me., who was found in a Roxbury rooming house a week after she had been taken from Old Orchard by three men who promised to give her work.

It was learned that three other girls have disappeared from their home near Old Orchard under the same pretext and are still missing. Names of the girls and of members of the ring are in possession of the department agents, it was announced today.

Boy Killed in Crash, Boston Driver Held

Wallingford, Conn., Aug. 27 (AP)—Engens Cucco, six years old, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was killed and 10 persons were injured, two critically in a collision today between two automobiles and a greyhound bus. None of the bus passengers were hurt.

Frank Kirkpatrick of East First st., South Boston, Mass., the bus driver; Salvatore Albano, 25, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Alexander Williams, Orange, N. J., operators of the cars, were held for questioning by the coroner.

Police reported they were told by a nurse that Miss Westbay, who has been confined to her bed with illness, suffered a high fever, was out of her head and was not responsible.

John Wanamaker, Jr., Quits New Bride for Reno Trip

Los Angeles, Aug. 27 (US)—His business before honeymoons with John Wanamaker, Jr., multi-millionaire New York and Philadelphia department store magnate.

Perhaps that's the secret of his success, but at any rate he has left for Reno on business, leaving behind his bride of two weeks, Mrs. Elizabeth Peltz Warburton Wanamaker.

Mrs. Wanamaker

"My husband has turned miner," said Mrs. Wanamaker. "He'll be back Tuesday."

It was in Reno that Wanamaker divorced his first wife, Mrs. Philip Disston Wanamaker, and the same day, August 9, married again.

Bennett Formally Opens 54th Canadian Exhibition

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 27—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett made the opening address at the fifty-fourth Canadian National Exhibition here. He said:

Prime Minister Bennett

"If Canada is to maintain her proud position as a fifth trading nation in the world, her people must exert every effort to assist the needs of customers throughout the empire. I appeal to Canadians everywhere not to let this country down. I ask that our new responsibilities be discharged with the same vigor and resourcefulness with which Canadians have done their duty in the past."

KENNEDY HELD IN HOTEL CASE

Lawrence, Aug. 27—Charged with defrauding a hotel of $70, James La Kennedy of Worcester, district manager of the Repeal Council, Inc., pleaded not guilty in district court today and was held in bonds of $200 for hearing Aug. 30.

The Ambassador Hotel claims that Kennedy, representing an organization working for repeal of the 18th Amendment, and nine girl workers occupied rooms at the hotel during the American Legion convention and were engaged in soliciting memberships.

When the convention adjourned, it is alleged Kennedy and his party left the hotel without paying their bills.

LEGION HOOTS DAVISON FOR BONUS STAND

N. Y. Vets Cry "Let Waters Tell It!" as the Cabinet Aid Seeks to Make Speech

New York, Aug. 27 (INS)—Jeering, and cries of "Let Waters tell it!" greeted Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison when he told the annual convention of the New York Department of the American Legion today that he personally opposed immediate payment of the veterans' bonus nad that the eviction of the bonus marchers from Washington by the army had averted serious trouble.

At this point both the delegates and spectators crowded in the Brooklyn Elks club broke out in a storm of boos and hisses which drowned out the faint applause.

Commander Walter E. Waters, who led the B. E. F., sat motionless in the gallery taking no part in the demonstration, and showing only by his white face the emotions which must have gripped him as the delegates cried for him to replace Davison on the speakers' platform.

CITES WAR RECORD

It was several moments before Commander Moses Hubbard could restore order and it was only when he cried out to the delegates to "be good sports" that they allowed the discomfited assistant secretary of war to continue.

Visibly shaken, Davison reminded his listeners that he had been an aviator during the war and as such felt that he was linked with the veterans.

"It is all right for veterans to do anything that is lawful to enforce the payment of the bonus," he said. "Congress turned a deaf ear to their proposal but before adjournment provided funds to pay the transportation of the veterans to their homes."

At this point there was another outburst of booing and cries of "we had no homes to go to." Hubbard had to make another appeal for order and then Davison proceeded:

"When the agents of the law came to put the veterans out of those old quarters they had in Washington, they were greeted

HER PROTEGES GET MILLIONS UNDER TRUST

Chicago, Aug. 27 (INS)—Edwin Krenn, friend and business associate of the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, turned over control of the Edith Rockefeller McCormick trust to Edward A. Dato because ehe feared disagreements with the Rockefeller and Harold F. McCormick families, it was revealed today.

In an interview, Dato, the Swiss immigrant who came to Chicago seeking his fortune some years ago, likened himself to Musolini and declared Kren was only an artist interested in the social size of life.

HOW CHILDREN FARE

This was made known today with revelation that other heirs to the millions of Mrs. McCormick are dealt with as follows:

Mrs. Muriel McCormick Hubbard, daughter, four-twelfths; Mrs. Matilde McCormick Oser, daughter, two-twelfths, and Fowler McCormick, thought to have been Mrs. McCormick's favorite child and now the husband of the former Fifi Stillman, only one-twelfth.

In disclosing the unusual agreement whereby Krenn accepted a guarantee of $2,000 a month income for life for release of control of the trust to Dato, the latter stated the pact was signed August 14.

"You see, Mr. Krenn was not friendly with the Rockefeller or the Harold F. McCormick families," Dato explained. "As an heir to her estate and as a trustee of the Edith Rockefeller McCormick Trust, he would be constantly thrown in with the relatives. His elimination would make matters easier."

ONCE WORTH 40 MILLIONS

Mrs. McCormick's fortune was once estimated at $40,000,000 but shrinkage of the values of stocks and real estate has considerably reduced it she invested between $1,000,000 and $25,000,000 in the Edith Rockefeller McCormick trust.

Dato recalled that he and Krenn went to school together in Zurich, Switzerland. It wasthere that Mrs. McCormick met Krenn, a young architect, at a psychological clinic.

"I rea din the papers about Mrs. Edith McCormick's divorce in 1921," Dato said, "I determined to look Krenn up. I had an intention and I thought he might be able to help me out."

FAMILY AROUSED

He came to Chicago, was induced to enter the real estate business with Krenn and Mrs. McCormick was made one of three trustees.

The family became concerned over Krenn's inheritance, data revealed, when Mrs. McCormick's death was imminent. Negotiations followed and were completed with the signing of the agreement on Aug. 14.

MRS. HARROWER ASKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Harrower, who achieved a measure of fame in 1925 as the "Barbara Frietchie of Beacon Hill" was wed to Harrower four years ago in a brilliant ceremony at Emmanuel Church.

Harrower, now living in Providence, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. David Harrower of William st., Worcester.

LEWIS FINED $10 IN LYNN COURT

Alfred Baker Lewis of Cambridge, Socialist party candidate for governor, was found guilty and fined $10 in Lynn district court today for failing to move on when ordered to do so by a policeman.

Lewis was addressing a crowd of shoe strikers on Eastern ave. yesterday according to the police. Arrested with him was Harry Maltzman of Chelsea, also fined $10.

They appealed the findings of Judge Reeve and Lewis said he would make a test case of the affair in the higher courts.

EVA TANGUAY IS BROKE, DYING

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 27 (AP)—Separated from her fortune and in a critical condition owing to months of illness, Eva Tanguay, famous stage and vaudeville star of years ago, is under the care of her sister here.

Miss Tanguay had a sinking spell Sunday which brought her almost to the point of death but since then has rallied. Her condition today still was critical, however. She is suffering from a heart ailment, Bright's disease and rheumatism.

The fortune of the actress was dissipated through Wall st. losses, bank failures and the passing of vaudeville. Mrs. Walter Gifford, the sister, watches over her during the day and they have managed to get together funds to employ a night nurse.

"We are hopeful for Miss Tanguay and doing everything possible, but things do not look very bright for us," said Mrs. Gifford.

Not many years ago Miss Tanguay's fortune was estimated at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Her sister said she now faces eviction from the modest little cottage because of a sheriff's order.

U.S. Banks Netted 50 Million Profit on German Bonds

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Brookings Institute estimates American bankers netted $50,000,000 in profits from the flotation here since 1923 of $1,280,000,000 worth of German bonds.

Estimates were based on a study by Dr. Robert P. Kuczynski, formerly of the research institution's staff.

It placed the par value of German bonds still outstanding in the United States at $954,330,000, or "about one-half of the par value of all German publicly-offered bonds which are still outstanding."

The institute said whether the profits made were "excessive" was a matter of judgment.

Democrats Answer Appeal for Funds

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—About 500 letters arrived at national Democratic headquarters today in response to Gov. Roosevelt's appeal for funds for the presidential campaign on Thursday night.

Eight clerks were put to work opening the mail and tabulating the contributors. The first 122 letters opened yielded a total of $925. One dollar contributions predominated.

NANCY HOYT SAD OVER REYNOLDS

Nancy Hoyt, impulsive Boston society girl and novelist, who recently divorced Edward Davison Curtis of Chestnut Hill, returned to New York on the Leviathan to repeat today that she had been very fond of Smith Reynolds, heir to $20,000,000, for whose mysterious death Libby Holman and his friend, Ab Walker, have been charged with murder.

It was on the Leviathan that she first met the young heir to tobacco millions, only 11 months ago, she said.

"We saw each other for 10 days after that and then parted, never to meet again. I had one letter from him and a couple of postcards.

"Once he telephoned to me. I was very fond of him but I wasn't engaged to him. I regret his death more than I can say."

Asked if she would go to Winston-Salem, N. C., where Reynolds' wife, the former torch singer, is under indictment, Miss Hoyt said she could be of no use to the investigation.

She divorced Curtis, a Harvard '14 man, in Reno, and has been in Paris recovering from an operation.

Beverly Tax Rate Is Increased $2.40

Beverly's tax rate for 1932 was announced today as $30.80, highest in the town's history, and an increa of $2.40 over last year's rate. The increase is caused, the assessors said, by a decline of more than $1,400,000 in the town's valuation.

5 MEN HELD IN POOL RACKETS

Five out of 8 men arrested in two raids in the police drive to smash pool rackets were held for hearings today in municipal court on lottery charges.

Anthony G. Frasca, 35, of Endicott st., North End, arrested as he was allegedly making collections from his pool agents, was charged with unlawfully setting up and promoting a lottery and his case continued to next Wednesday.

Four Dorchester men, Joseph Berman of Blue Hill ave., Irving Singer of Winston rd., Leopold Saroker of Wildwood st., and Jacob Snyder of Wildwood st., arrested in a raid on a Washington st., restaurant, were held for a hearing September 2.

200,000 IDLE IN BRITISH STRIKE

Manchester, Eng., Aug. 27 (AP)—At noon today the factory whistles throughout Lancashire called 200,000 cotton workers out on a strike which threatens to become the greatest industrial war Great Britain has experienced since the nationwide general strike of 1926.

How far the strike call will be obeyed by the weavers, who are the first affected, will not be known until Monday morning when the mills reopen their doors.

Negotiations for peace were wrecked, not on the main issue of wages, but the reinstatement of about 3000 workers already on strike.

There was no sign that the government would intervene at the present stage.

HERO'S WOODEN LEG SCORCHED IN SAVING 6 FROM FIRE

HIS SECOND RESCUE IN SIX MONTHS

William H. Stevens of 39 Orchard st., Roxbury, surveys damage to his wooden leg after risking his life for second time in six months to rescue persons from fire. Returning home early today after a tour for Edward C. Carroll, whose campaign for senator he is managing, Stevens saw fire in the house at 44 Orchard st. He made three trips into the building through flames and each time brought out two children to safety. Some months ago he rescued a woman from fire in an Egleston sq. building. (Staff photo.)

HULL CROWDED FOR GALA DAY CELEBRATION

With bunting flying from Rockaway to Black Rock all up the Nantasket shore, Hull today celebrated its 20th annual gala day.

Opening with a grand ball last night, continuing through today with a long program of water and field sports and entertainment and closing tonight with fireworks and red light display, the celebration brings together the summer and year-round residents of Hull in accordance with the plan of William T. A. Fitzgerald, Suffolk County register of deeds, first put into effect a quarter of a century ago.

Last night's ball at Pemberton Inn was one of the most successful of the long series with 300 present.

Several thousand children and elders participate in today's events which include land and swimming races, water novelty events and sailboat races, free movies, pony rides and a Punch and Judy show for the children, a demonstration of calisthenics by the children at Bayside playground, a tennis tournament, men's golf putting contest, quoits and two baseball games.

The senior ball game betwees the Bayside and Weymouth teams will feature the sports program this afternoon.

Red fire will burn along the waterfront tonight, and at 9 o'clock at the Bayside playground there will be a band concert and fireworks.

Chairmen of the various events are as follows: W. H. Brine, junior sports; John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., ball game; John A. Conway, tennis; Charles A. McMorrow, water sports; John J. Terry, children's entertainment; James J. Sullivan, quoits; Charles J. Lally, golf; W. T. A. Fitzgerald, band concert; Joseph P. Sherwin, fireworks, and C. J. Murphy, finance.

BETTER TIMES ARE SEEN FOR CHURCHES

The Rev. E. D. Dolan, field secretary for the Massachusetts Baptist Convention, and president of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, prophesies improved conditions this coming winter for churches struggling for their very existence.

Dr. Dolan, who has visited every town in Massachusetts with the exception of about a dozen still yesterday in an interview there is much that is hopeful on the present economic horizon. His home has been in Massachusetts and where wheels are begining to turn.

"No Baptist church in the State," he declared, "has closed its doors. In many localities the janitor work is now done by volunteers. Paid organists and singers have been replaced by other volunteers. In such ways expenses have been much reduced."

According to Dr. Dolan there has come about in recent years a tendency to combine and double up. Twenty-eight Baptist clergymen in the state have at least two parishes. In Rochester and Lakeville the Congregationalists are trying what is known as the "larger parish." Two or three men take care of all the Congregational churches, each being a specialist in one direction.

In Bolton, Harvard, Stow and Berlin other forms of cooperation are working out successfully, he says. In Bolton, which is Dr. Dolan's old home town, the Baptist, Unitarian and Quaker churches have combined in a successful organization.

'Jesus Christ' Subject for C. S. Churches

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, August 28.

The Golden Text is: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever." (Hebrews 13:8).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "With this usual impetuosity, Simon replied for his brethren, and his reply set forth a great fact: 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.' That is: The Messiah is what thou hast declared—Christ, the spirit of God, of Truth, Life, and Love, which heals mentally. This assertion elicited from Jesus the response: 'Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven;' that is: Love hath shown thee the way of Life" (p. 137.)

Floating Hospital Honor 4 With Days

George Robert Lodge, Elisha and Edward Smith and an unknown "Ellen" will be honored by special days, bearing their names, at the Boston Floating Hospital, it was announced today.

Mrs. Constance C. Williams of Washington established the George Cabot Lodge day, while Miss Marion A. Smith contributed the memorial to her relative. The donor of the funds for "Ellen" day is an anonymous contributor of many years. A memorial bed in one of the infants' wards has been established by Mrs. William E. Houghton of Swampscott, in memory of her husband.

MULDOON WEDS IN DORCHESTER

Miss Catherine E. Hurley, Boston school teacher, became the bride today of Robert J. Muldoon, Somerville city solicitor and chairman of that city's Democratic committee, in St. Peter's Church, Dorchester.

Following the nuptial mass, celebrated by Rev. Leo O'Day, there were a reception and breakfast for 200 guests at the Copley Plaza. The couple left on an auto tour and will return to live in Medford.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hurley of Tonawanda st. and taught at the Champlain school. She was in the 1925 class at Teachers College. Her sister, Mrs. Joseph Casey, was maid of honor. Another sister, Miss Nora Hurley, and Miss Loretta Burns, a classmate, were maids of honor.

The best man was John Bina of Medford.

ROOSEVELT IS FRIEND OF VETS

Washington, Aug. 27 (US)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in his most recent bonus army incidents in the national capital as a "disastrous situation" over which he has been "deeply distressed."

What is believed to be his first public comment on the treatment of the World War veterans, driven from Washington by federal troops is embodied in a letter received by Belmont of Washington, a member of the R. F. V. in reply to a message of congratulation on one of Roosevelt's recent speeches.

Gov. Roosevelt wrote:

"As a legislature and member of many veterans' organizations, I am particularly interested in the problems of the ex-service man. Naturally, I have been deeply distressed by the disastrous situation in Washington, and can appreciate your own unhappiness over the instance you witnessed."

Belmont offered to give up a position to aid the Roosevelt campaign, but the governor said he hardly felt he had the right to ask any man to do that.

Belmont issued a statement today calling on ex-service men everywhere to support the Democratic nominee.

BIG INCREASE IN TEXTILE TRADE

New York, Aug. 27 (INS)—Price advances in basic textile commodities and sharp gains in cotton, have brought the best business in the textile industry since the depression began, a survey today disclosed.

Selling houses have been flooded with orders and several cotton and woolen mills were compelled to withdraw quotations on finished goods and place them on an "at value" basis because of heavy commitments during the last few days.

A big demand for gray cloth, the unfinished material used for cotton fabrics, followed the 1c to 1½c rise in cotton. Cotton is now at 8¼ cents a pound for middling, or nearly three cents higher than a month ago. Many mills reported completely sold up in gray cloth.

Huge orders were placed this week a checkup today showed, by chain and department stores, mail order houses and large wholesale manufacturers for cotton, silk and woolen fabrics. Silk prices continue unsettled and woolen goods prices showed a price improvement for the first time in five years.

Orders for fabrics and men's clothing were heavy and in some quarters a scarcity of the best goods was predicted.

BROCKTON FAIR TO SET RECORD

When the Brockton Fair opens Tuesday, Sept. 13, for five days and five nights, it will present a program that indicates its sponsors are convinced the depression is slipping into history.

Every department has been enlarged to the limit, with new features galore.

For the daily stage shows, a long list of vaudeville and hippodrome turns have been contracted, with Hugo Zacchini, famous circus star, being shot from a cannon as a thrilling finale to each performance. Each night show will terminate with fireworks.

Horse races will be presented the first three days with auto races on last two, the list of drivers including Peter Fraine, winner of the 500-mile Indianapolis classic last May.

The horse show will have a more pretentious list of entries than ever before, reports say the best of the show stables in this country and Canada. Cattle, sheep, poultry and pet stock will be exhibited in large numbers, as well as flowers, fruits and vegetables.

The new Massachusetts building will be dedicated Friday, Sept. 16 with Gov. Ely attending.

There will also be competition between Legion bands, drum and bugle corps.

Woman Found Dead in Scalding Tub

Cleveland, Aug. 27 (AP)—Half covered with scalding water, the body of Mrs. Marguerite Zihlman, 44, wife of Fred Zihlman, seat supreme dictator of the Loyal Order of Moose, was found late last night in a bathtub in her hotel room here. Physicians said Mrs. Zihlman died of a heart attack.

Canadian Oil Man Dies

Toronto, Aug. 27 (AP)—Silas Richard Parsons, chairman of the board of the British-American Oil Co. Ltd., died here today after a long illness. He was 78.

JUDGE MARDEN PASSES AWAY

A week after he celebrated his 79th birthday at Judge Oscar A. Marden of Stoughton passed away early today, following six months of illness.

A resident of Stoughton for 55 years, Judge Marden was born in Palermo, Me., where his father, Stephen P. Marden, was state representative.

Coming to Boston in 1872, Judge Marden worked for a time as bookkeeper and later entered Boston University Law School.

He was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1876 and leaves a distinguished record of many years.

Washington Kin to Unveil Monument

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Anne Madison Washington, who flew over 14 states with speed Pilot Jimmie Doolittle, is honor of her great-great-great grandniece, George Washington, now has two more bicentennial celebration engagements.

She will leave Sunday night for Columbus, Ga., to be present at the Washington pageantry there and she will unveil a monument at Clyde, N. Y., on Labor Day.

Jailer Best Man as Prisoner Weds

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 27 (AP)—Thomas Drost, 24, of Hartford, who is awaiting a superior court trial next month on a bond charge, was married in the Fairfield county jail today to Miss Mary A. Dillon, 22, of Hartford. The jailer acted as best man.

Annual Terrapin Race Called Off

Ponca City, Okla., Aug. 27 (AP)—Terrapins won't race at the 101 Ranch Labor Day. The annual feature was called off by Colonel Zack Miller, last of the three brothers of 101 fame, because of financial difficulties.

The Present Belongs to Youth . . . What Is He Doing With It?

Boston Pilgrims Leave Tonight

The second annual pilgrimage from Boston to the Shrine of the North American Martyrs at Auriesville, N. Y., will be made tomorrow under the direction of the Rev. William R. Crawford, S. J., rector of Boston College High School.

Leaving South Station at 10:30 o'clock tonight, the pilgrims will arrive at the shrine in Central New York about 8 A. M. Sunday. The Rosary will be recited as the Hill of Torture is ascended.

ARCHBISHOP WILLIAMS

The twenty-fifth annual Pontifical Mass of Requiem for the repose of the soul of the late Archbishop Williams will be celebrated at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Tuesday, August 30, at 9 A. M. by His Eminence the Cardinal.

At this annual service, His Eminence will be assisted by the priests of the Cathedral.

Truth Guild Car Proves Success

In an interesting report from the Catholic Truth Guild touring car that left Boston some 14 months ago, under the direction of David Goldstein, comes an account of many adventures and of largely attended meetings all the way from Boston to Los Angeles and from Texas to Minnesota.

In Redding and Sacramento, says the writer, stones were thrown at the car and at the speakers. These outbreaks were laid to Communists who also hissed the crucifix when it was attached to a pole holding the loud speaker.

During the past 14 months this lecture car and its personnel have been seen traveling over 29,000 miles of American territory.

UNFAITHFUL WIFE IS TOPIC

The Rev. S. W. Powell of Elgin, Ill., will conclude his month's ministry at the Dudley Street Baptist Church tomorrow, and will take for his morning theme the character and life of the prophet Moses. The story of this man of tragedy has often been a matter for controversy. Hosea, as is known, was deserted by his wife and was left to bring up his children. Later he forgave the sinful woman and bought her back out of slavery. Among the questions to be answered by Mr. Powell are: "Are wives responsible for their husbands' failures?" and "Do we all suffer from debased ideas of sex?" and "How far should a man go with an unfaithful wife?"

At the evening service matters for treatment will be "Does it make any difference what we believe?", "What was the greatest day in the history of the world?" and "Are you willing to bet your life on Christ?"

Mrs. Edith Weye Wilson, contralto and C. Ralph Young, baritone, will be the guest soloists and the Junior Choir of 50 voices will sing at the morning service.

Dr. Powell returns to his own pulpit at the First Baptist Church, Elgin, Ill., on the first Sunday in September. A cordially hearty welcome is extended to everybody to worship at "The Singing Church" tomorrow.

Memorial Meeting at Nantasket Beach

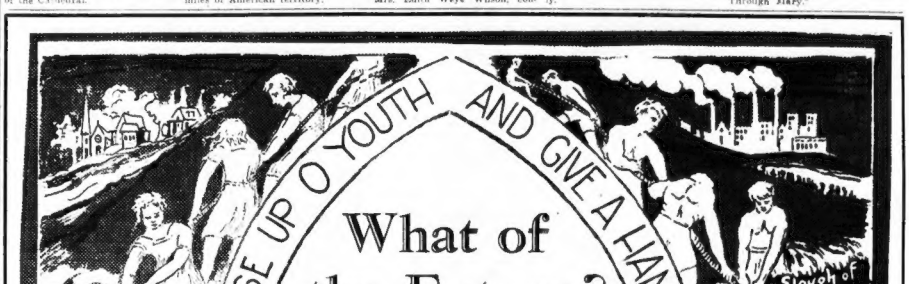
Aware of the significance of the immortal name of Dr. Theodor Herzl, founder and formulating of political Zionism, the Brookline Zionists under the leadership of their president, C. Augustus Holmes have arranged for a Herzl memorial meeting at Temple Israel, Nantasket Beach, which will take place tomorrow at 8 p. m. promptly.

Questions Asked and Answered

Each Sunday afternoon on Boston Common following short sermons by ministers of many denominations, curious onlookers, not satisfied with points of view taken by the speakers are given opportunity to ask questions. This question period is often the most interesting and enlightening. Tomorrow at the usual time, 2:45, three pastors will be at the stand reserved for the Greater Boston Federation of Churches near the Charles st. gate on Boston Common Mall.

TRUTH GUILD ON COMMON

Every Sunday afternoon at 4 P. M. on the Charles st. Mall, the subject of the "Blessed Virgin" will be presented. C. F. Reid will speak on "Mary Mother of God and Man." A. W. Hommel will speak on "The Immaculate Conception and T. P. Brady will speak on "All Graces Through Mary."



RISE UP young people and give a hand. Youth is so full of hope, of faith, of confidence, that they continue to see a rosey dawn when their elders often are sure twilight is approaching.

We hear from young men and young women words of impatience blaming their elders for depression, for narrow-mindedness in connection with home, moral conduct, the church, and government.

What are you doing about it young people? How do you propose to live in 1935 when everything will be in your hands? Will your homes be centers of love and interest? Will your churches be full to the doors with activities that arouse the enthusiasm of old and young? Are you ready to promise improvement in the economic system that will safeguard against periodic depression?

Many a young person is asking for independence and a right to try experiments outside the beaten path of convention. Such a course is full of danger, but if new and better ways for carrying on this old earth are thus discovered high praise will be theirs.

We are told that better times are approaching, not only for the money market, but for education, home life, and for religion. Lessons learned by tragic experiences should set mankind much further along his upward way than had there been no crises. Are you, as young people studying the situation so that you may not stumble in the same way as your elders when you are acting as guides for still another generation.

It is rumored that youth today is free from serious thinking, and has little or no plan for future development, seeks entertainment only, and avoids the study of religion, philosophy, and deeper learning, preferring a good time. These rumors may be gossip only, spread about to discredit a generation bent on doing away with hurtful traditions only, and installing scientific tests for that which is worthwhile.

The entire world is hoping for better times to come. Youth will handle those better times when they come . . . how?

Rise up, Oh Youth, and give a hand.

This educational endeavor is made possible by the following public-spirited citizens who are striving to make our community a finer and a better place in which to live.

MYSTERY GIRL SENTENCED TO 3 MONTHS

Another girl who refused at first to reveal her identity was given a jail sentence today in municipal court by Judge Charles L. Carr.

Only the intervention of her mother, who claimed that probation officials refused to allow the girl to communicate with her, saved the girl from going to Charles st. jail.

She was given a three months suspended sentence in Charles st. on condition that she would serve that period at the House of the Good Shepherd.

The girl's case parallels that of Dorothy Adams, who was arrested in boy's clothing for stealing a 10-cent roll of tape, except that today's girl was charged only with drunkenness and the name she gave was Mary Smith. The mysterious Dorothy had her case not pressed after Judge Carr had sent her to jail in a "star chamber" court session.

"Mary Smith" was arrested Thursday on the drunkenness charge, but after she was held in $500 bail yesterday when she refused to give her real identity, probation officials learned who she was.

Today Miss Annie McClure, the probation officer, informed the court of the girl's identity and said her mother had been notified. The mother later charged that the girl was not allowed to communicate with her.

"I am going to send her straight to jail," said Judge Carr. "She is trying to do the same thing as some other girl has done here."

The girl asked how long a sentence she would draw in jail if she did not go to the House of the Good Shepherd.

"We won't trade with you," said Judge Carr. "You will go to the House of the Good Shepherd or take a sentence."

The girl eventually consented to remain three months at the shelter home and Judge Carr imposed a three months suspended sentence

Police engaged on the street investigation were unable to account for the few fraud cases in the new list, as compared with the first batch of names, without suspecting that the new list was "hand picked," they said.

GUARD AGAINST REDS

While extra police today guarded against the appearance of more radicals in the vicinity of the welfare building in Hawkins st., two men arrested in a near riot yesterday were found guilty in municipal court.

Mark Lieberman, 22, of Shawmut ave., was fined $20 by Judge Good for passing out handbills without a permit. He appealed and being unable to provide bail was taken to Charles st. jail.

Arthur Johnson, 22, colored, of Sterling st. Roxbury, was given a month's suspended sentence for attempting to rescue Lieberman after his arrest.

TELLS OF BATTLE

Special Officer Thomas Brennan testified that he heard a commotion and found Lieberman on a woodpile in the city woodyard talking to the large crowd of unemployed men waiting for their dole checks.

"Lieberman was shouting that $9 was not enough for a man with five children," said Brennan. "I took him off the woodpile, showed him my badge and started away with him.

"Johnson ran up and said 'You can't take him,' and tried to rescue Lieberman. I arrested Johnson, too."

"I didn't know he was an officer," said Lieberman. "I was only asking the men to come to City Hall Monday at 2 p. m. to protest Mayor Curley's police investigation of welfare."

The long-awaited statement from Police Commissioner Hultman, on the investigations of his special squad of police, was still awaited today.

To date, any number of cases in which habitual drunks have drawn city cash have been unearthed, in addition to those in which persons with bank accounts and those with criminal records have drawn aid.

The city law department, whose investigation is independent to that of the police, filed attachments today against four more married couples with bank accounts who have been receiving aid. This made seven accounts attached in two days. Asst. Corp. Counsel Hale Power said the families had "substantial amounts" in the banks.

LAST RITES FOR RETIRED CHIEF

Funeral services for Joseph A. Dolan, retired deputy chief of the Boston fire department, were held at the Church of The Holy Name, West Roxbury, today with Rev. Charles H. Bryson officiating.

Rev. Charles F. Riley was deacon, Rev. S. A. Howley, S. J., sub-deacon and Rev. Edward Reid, master of ceremonies.

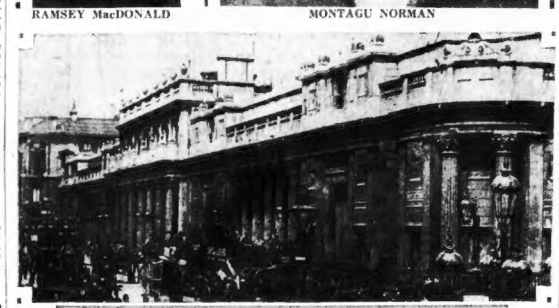
OUR MYSTERIOUS VISITOR

RAMSEY MacDONALD MONTAGU NORMAN



BANK OF ENGLAND

Mr. Montagu Norman (above) now in "retreat" at Bar Harbor, Me., is governor of the Bank of England (shown here). For two centuries the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," as the bank is known, has guarded the finances of the British Empire. It manages the British national debt, collects British public revenue, holds British Government deposits and is guarded by British troops. Mr. Norman, its financial genius, is as much part of the British Government as Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald (left) with whom he collaborated in arranging the Hoover moratorium.

NORMAN'S VISIT HINTS DEBT CUT MOVE

Mr. Norman came to this country touched at Queenstown, Junius Spencer Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, boarded it and conferred secretly with Mr. Norman.

Young Morgan is a partner in the Morgan banking house. The Morgan banking house is the fiscal agent of the British Empire.

The elder Morgan is a frequent visitor at the White House, and is known to be the power behind the throne in the Hoover administration.

Sinister Motive May Lie Behind Visit

The international bankers generally are planning eventual debt cancellation and immediate extension of the moratorium. Those financial experts who are best informed think that Mr. Norman's visit to America has to do with the extension of the moratorium and debt cancellation.

It may be that the visit also has something to do with the presidential campaign.

Foreign nations are very anxious to see the present administration continued in power.

This administration has been very favorable to the various plans of England and France.

The moratorium of 1931 occurred immediately after a previous mysterious visit by Mr. Norman to this country.

It is not likely that the moratorium would be extended by a Democratic administration, or that debt cancellation would be agreed to by a Democratic Congress.

It is therefore greatly to the interest of foreign nations that an administration favorable to foreign interests and largely under the control of the international bankers and the fiscal agents of foreign powers should be continued in control of American affairs.

Foreign Money May Be Used in Campaign

The extreme mystery of Mr. Norman's visit leads some of the Democratic politicians to believe that foreign money may find its way into the presidential campaign.

The chain of contacts would give some likelihood to this conjecture.

Mr. Norman is the Governor of the Bank of England. The House of Morgan is the fiscal agent of the British Empire.

The contacts, therefore, are ready at hand for England and perhaps for other nations to exert a powerful influence in the American campaign, provided sufficient secrecy is maintained and the public generally does not learn of the activity of foreign powers in American politics.

These facts probably account for the extreme mystery surrounding Mr. Norman's visit to America, and the unwillingness of administration officials to discuss Mr. Norman's visit.

Norman's Visit Definitely Linked With Debt Situation

"Mr. Norman has made several visits to the United States, on all of which his missions, if any, were undisclosed officially. He visited the United States in the spring of 1931 and the mystery which surrounded that trip occasioned a host of rumors, especially since while in Washington he conferred with President Hoover, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of State Stimson, Eugene Meyer, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and others."

The New York Evening Post says:

"The belief is expressed that Mr. Norman's visit is for the purpose of feeling out this country in respect of its attitude on Allied debts.

"More specifically, Mr. Norman is, according to these reports, to find out what the foreign debtors of the United States should do, if anything, to get in line for reductions in the amounts that must be paid under existing agreements."

It may be stated as a reasonable certainty that Mr. Norman is here to secure an extension of the moratorium and a reduction or cancellation of the Allied debts to the United States.

It may be regarded as a possibility that he is here during the presidential campaign in order to further the interests of his country in American politics, which he is in a position to accomplish partly through the House of Morgan and partly through those other international bankers who are the financial agents of foreign powers, and who have profited by the favoring conditions of the Hoover administration, and are willing to contribute liberally to see those conditions continued.

ANTI-BONUS PLEA JEERED

by jeers and brickbats, and there was fighting.

"It was necessary to get troops to establish the authority of the government itself to prevent further bloodshed. President Hoover acted ..."

As he mentioned the President's name a wave of booing swept down from the galleries gathering momentum as the delegates joined in. In vain Hubbard rapped for order. The booing continued as the Legionnaires anxious to express their resentment, roared, hissed and jeered.

Dole Cards on 3 More Arrested as 'Drunks'

Among six arrested for drunkenness in East Boston last night were two men and a woman who are receiving aid from the city, according to the police.

They are Louise Iovanna, Bremen st.; Daniel Callahan, Bennington st. and James McInnis, Havre st., all of East Bosign, the police said. The welfare department will be notified.

KIDNAPERS ON PHONE SPURN $7500 OFFER

No crime inthe history of gangdom in this section has been attended with so much coolness, such lack of caution and downright disregard of consequences if arrest should follow.

Given only cursory attention by police of Greater Boston at first, the dragging of the Winthrop man from his car in broad daylight, in a thickly settled and select residential district, two days ago, threatens eventually to write a long and explosive chapter in Boston criminal history.

GANG IN BOAT DEAL

Some of the members of the kidnap gang, according to clues uncovered by the Boston Evening American today, were involved in a boat deal a few weeks ago.

They were "hit" financially—where it hurt the worst—and are out, evidently, to recoup their losses. They were desperate and, confronted with little chance of making sizeable profits in liquor or other rackets, turned to the "snatching" game, which Chicago gangsters in the past few years have developed into one of the seven arts of the underworld—and the easiest to "cash in" on.

The boat deal clue led to the door of a man who lived for the most part in Revere, although he had a hangout in Boston.

REVERE MAN INVOLVED

Investigation there showed he had not been around for three days, and this strengthened suspicion. Further search gave irrefutable facts linking this man with the kidnaping.

The Revere man has a private garage in Everett, used generally for the storage of speedy autos used in liquor running.

This garage has been inspected but—as was expected—the high-powered sedan used in the kidnaping was not there.

One of the members of the gang was involved in a big jewelry robbery a few years ago but was never convicted. He is an expert chauffeur and is believed to have driven the car which the "snatchers" used when they seized their victim.

Police have been refused all information by Goldberg's relatives regarding places where the ransom money may be delivered.

The first demand, as the Boston Evening American exclusively announced yesterday, was to Mrs. Goldberg Thursday night. She was asked for $10,000 to be handed over the the representative of the gang by 11 o'clock Friday.

INCREASE RANSOM

The cash could not be raised that quick. The gang then opened negotiations with another member of the family, raising the demand and launching a series of bold telephone calls which continued today, in utter disregard of the authorities.

Police are causing trouble for them, however, by watching the building at 31 Milk st., where Goldberg has safe deposit boxes containing can hand securities, and by persistent questioning all of his associates and surveillance of several apartments, to which auto registration numbers led them.

The ransom offer of $7500, the Boston American learned, was decided upon at a family conference, and another conference of a few relatives was called to determine what action would be taken on the kidnapers' ultimatum—$15,000. ...

While the kidnapers made no threats, and even gave indication that they feel there is plenty of time, displaying no fear whatever of detection, the family is understood to be growing increasingly alarmed and anxious to make a settlement within 24 hours.

WAY TO CATCH BURGLARS

JOE BROOKS CHARLES BERKEBILE

$300,000 FIRE AT BUCKNELL

Lewisburg, Pa., Aug. 27 (AP)—Old Main and its two wings, Bucknell University's first buildings, were destroyed by fire today. Flames drove college professors and firemen from the halls.

D. L. Rank, comptroller, said the loss will be $300,000. One of the principal losses is the nationally famous zoological collection of Dr. Nelson S. Davis, valued at $50,000.

Dr. Homer L. Rainey, president, said Bucknell will be ready to receive its incoming freshman classes on schedule Sept. 7.

ROBBERS LOOT LEATHER SHOP

Handbags and leather goods valued at $1000 were stolen from the Peerless Leather Goods Company at 133 Summer st. during the night.

The robbers broke the glass in the door of the stockroom in the rear and took four suitcases which they used as conveyors for the handbags and other goods.

The robbery was discovered by the proprietor, Michael Nathenson of Mattapan, and Francis Egan, elevator operator.

RICH MATRON CALLS DANCER'S SUIT 'PLOT'

Holyoke, Aug. 27.—The wealthy Whiting family was literally "up in arms" today over the $150,000 suit of Maurice Humphrey, night club dancer, and protege of Mrs. Samuel R. Whiting.

Mrs. Whiting, sister-in-law of William F. Whitney, former Secretary of Commerce, was ill at her home in Northampton st. and could be interviewed only through her son, Samuel R. Whiting, Jr.

Young Whiting characterized the latest suit and the suit of Humphrey's wife for alienation of affections as "an attempt on the part of the Humphreys to collect money from Mrs. Whiting.

"The claims were made up. They are without foundation and can be quickly and effectively refuted," Whiting said.

The latest suit was revealed in New York yesterday when the court allowed service of the suit by publication. The alienation suit, in which $250,000 is sought by Humphrey's wife, was filed a year ago last month.

Mrs. Whiting became interested in Humphrey when she saw him dance in a night club in Atlantic City. He was teamed with his wife.

Possibilities of a dramatic caress were seen by Mrs. Whiting and she offered to aid him.

Humphrey's suit charges that Mrs. Whiting "induced" him to quit his night club activities and take up a musical course, for which she paid.

Then came an offer of $100 a week for life, that was paid for a few weeks and then ceased, Humphrey charged.

The dancer claimed that he gave up the night club salary of $250 a week to accept the alleged offer.

Mrs. Whiting's son said no such offer was ever made.

The family itself admitted that Mrs. Whiting had befriended the dancer and paid for courses toward a career.

ROSE LORING

* * *

Society has a warm spot in its heart for the name of Loring and especially for the charming and philanthropical lady, Miss Katherine . . .

* * *

For years the North Shore has depended on her for support of its many charities and civic interests . . . she has never been found wanting . . .

* * *

Her pretty niece, Rose, will curtsy to many of old Boston's representatives, young and not so young, and many squires of dames . . . the college season will be near on the tenth and many of the young men who have travelled far from home during the summer will have returned, eager to look over the coming bouquet of buds . . .

* * *

Sister Debs as Assistants

NO DOUBT THE SETTING WILL BE THE BEAUTIFUL gardens of Burnside and the toast of the afternoon will receive with her mother, Mrs. Augustus P. Loring . . .

* * *

Sister debutantes will assist at the tea tables, among them Frances Burnett, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Francis Burnett, of Milton and Beverly Farms; Mary Barbour, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barbour, of Clarendon st.; Elizabeth Locke, season's bud of the Edwin A. Lockes, of 177 Beacon st.; Louisa Vaughan, Samuel Vaughan's offering of last season, and Mary (Polly) Cunningham, one of the charming buds from Milton, daughter of the Stanley Cunninghams and sister of Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr.

* * *

THERE WILL BE MANY others who will pour for the fashionable assemblage which will gather to do honor to Miss Rose . . .

* * *

Louisa Vaughan

THE AUGUSTUS LORINGS are always active in North Shore activities and have many family connections both there and in Boston which means a round of parties for the debutante.

* * *

LOUISA VAUGHAN IS ROSE'S cousin, and as she stepped out last year, she can give many hints on the conduct of a deb to her rather quiet relative . . .

* * *

Must Have Opera

TO GIVE IMPETUS TO DEBUTANTE affaire . . . there will be no grand opera season this winter, we are informed . . . although we refuse to believe it. January without opera . . . ?

* * *

THIS YEAR WE ARE GOING to see a great increase in the popularity of flying . . . of that there can be no doubt. We hear more and more of people who fly from Boston to New York, Chicago and Bar Harbor as frequently as they travel by boat or train.

* * *

PERHAPS WE WILL HEAR of debutantes of other cities flying over for Miss Somebody's ball and taking the early airplane back in the morning . . .

* * *

Girls Lead Way

NEVER HAS THERE BEEN such enthusiasm for "taking the air" and it is so inexpensive, safe and simple. Three years ago the idea of a safe and reliable light airplane with a speed of 100 miles an hour and capacity of three persons besides the pilot, would have seemed impossible. This season has seen many such at the summer resorts . . . some large enough for whole families.

* * *

THE YOUNG FOLKS OF other cities seem more enterprising in this field than the Boston group . . . in other parts of the country it is not uncommon for the ultra-smart set to fly their own planes from one point to another . . . Boston is always a little behind in everything, but we hear of several young girls who are planning "flying lessons," and once it takes hold of the fancy of the Fair Things . . . look out . . . they do things thoroughly and are real sports in New England.

Theater Group at Shore

"Alice in Wonderland" will be brought to the North Shore next week by Mrs. Clare Tree Major, of the Children's Theater in New York.

The play is to be given on Monday at the estate of Mrs. Alice Kingman of Marblehead, and the following day at Pride's Crossing, on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Mason. The plays will be presented under the auspices of the Women's International League, whose founder and international president is Jane Adams.

Mrs. Clare Tree Major, actress and dramatist and director of the theater, is a member of the Broadhurst Tree family of England, and her company presents a series of plays each winter in Boston.

"Alice in Wonderland," always a favorite, is being featured this year because 1932 marks the hundredth birthday of its author, Lewis Carroll. It was as part of the celebration of the Lewis Carroll centenary that the "Original Alice" of England, for whom the book was written, came to New York, last winter, for presentation of the play by Clare Tree Major's Company there.

Among the many sponsors for this event are Mrs. Kenneth E. Bell, Mrs. Edward Botsford, Mrs. Samuel H. Brown, Jr., Rev. Dwight L. Carr, Rev. and Mrs. Edward H. Cotton, Mrs. Carl Dreyfus, Mrs. George W. Dunckles, Miss Edith Fabens, Mrs. Theodore Fletcher, Mrs. Edwin Hall, Mrs. I. Howland Jones, Mrs. S. B. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Alice Kingman, Mrs. Bradshaw Landmaid, Mrs. Walter K. Shaw, Jr., Mrs. Miles Standish, Mrs. Ralph Symonds, Mrs. David Wheatland, Mrs. Mary E. William, and Mrs. Allan Morse, of Swampscott.

Also, Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick and Mrs. Alexander Steinert of Beverly, Mrs. Thomas Barbour, Mrs. William DeFord Beal, Mrs. Russell Burrage, Miss Edith Fitz, Miss Sarah Franks, Mrs. Charles E. Hodges, Mrs. Henry Lee, Mrs. Clarence Henry Poor and Mrs. Walter T. Stern of Beverly Farms.

Rain and Cloud Bank Keeps Flying Family in Quebec

Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson, mother of the flying family stranded on a small island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence on their flight to Europe, writes another chapter of their adventures. Her story is sent exclusively to Universal Service through the American Radio News Corporation's station WRH.

By MRS. BLANCHE HUTCHINSON

(Copyright, 1932 Universal Service, Inc.)

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Que., Aug. 27—I am sending the news to you today through the private wireless station of our host, C. R. Townsend, manager of the paper company which owns this picturesque island.

Something suddenly went wrong with the radio in our plane, but men have been working on it all day and assure us that it will be working again before we take off on the 426 mile hop to Hopedale, Labrador.

We awoke early today, eager to be off for Hopedale, only to be greeted by a steady downpour of rain.

Even the rain wouldn't have prevented our take-off, however, if it hadn't been for the dense, low banks of clouds, which would have made flying impossible.

So we are having another day on Anticosti Island. And Kathryn and Janet are delighted.

They are improving their time learning French from the children of the French-Canadian lumbermen who have their homes here, and who work for the paper company.

I was glad today that I brought along galoshes for all of us. We dressed for the rain and took a long hike through the woods.

"Retournes un autre jour."

Which means:

"Rain, rain, go away, come again some other day."

MIANNE PALFREY IS BRIDE OF ARTHUR D. HILL, JR.

4 Sisters in Role of Maids

In the pretty little town of Sharon the wedding of Miss Mianne Palfrey to Arthur Dehon Hill, Jr., is to be solemnized at 4 p. m. today at the Unitarian Church in a setting of cedars and summer flowers. The Rev. Dr. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, rector of Trinity Church, Boston, and a friend of the families, will officiate.

The bride has selected a gown of ivory satin, and will wear an old lace veil, an heirloom, and will carry a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Sisters Bridesmaids

The four bridesmaids, all sisters of the bride, will be Miss Margaret Germaine Palfrey, Elizabeth Howland Palfrey, Sarah Hammond Palfrey, and the youngest, Miss Joanna Oakes Palfrey, who will make her debut this fall. They will be gowned in yellow gorgette costumes with wide yellow straw hats, and will carry bouquets of pale yellow roses and purple lealioea.

The bridegroom will have the services of Mr. A. Sherman Hill as best man, and ten ushers will assist. They will be Mr. Budd E. Pollak and Mr. Edward K. Straus, both of New York City, Mr. Robert P. Post, of Bayport, L. I., Mr. Robert G. Fairborn, of Morristown, N. J., Mr. Hunt T. Wagstaff, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., Mr. J. Gardiner Coolidge, 2d, of Brookline, Mr. Arthur G. Delony, Jr., of Newtown, Conn., Mr. Edwin D. W. Sprague and Mr. John E. Sheldon, both of Milton, and Mr. Leroy Pemberton, of Philadelphia.

Miss Palfrey is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey, of 108 Ivy st., Brookline, and Bluff Head Farm, Sharon. She is a graduate of the Winsor school and was presented to society two years ago. She was elected to membership of the Junior League and the Vincent Club in the same year.

Fiance Harvard Man

Her fiance is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dehon Hill, of 17 Brimmer st. He was graduated from the Groton school in 1928 and is a member of the class of 1932 at Harvard. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770, D. K. E., Signet Society and Iroquois Clubs. The couple will make their residence at 250 Brattle st., Cambridge, and will be at home after October 1st.

At the close of the service there is to be a reception at the home of the bride's parents for immediate relatives and close friends.

Judge Urges Wife to Thrash Husband

Media, Pa., Aug. 27 (AP)—If the advice of Judge John M. Broomhall is heeded, John Ryan, 37, was due for a thrashing at the hands of his wife today.

Mrs. Ryan accompanied her husband to court where he appeared to be sentenced for passing a bad check.

"Take him home and thrash him," the judge said.

MRS. KELLOGG — SALLY WHITE — KITTY TALBOT — MRS. CHURCH

Smart society is well represented by these active members of the young set along the North Shore. They are Mrs. Ralph Kellogg, Sally White, Kitty Talbot and Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., the former Agnes Boardman. They have taken prominent parts in the summer social program.

Chatty Notes on Activities of Leaders at Gay Resorts

Dr. A. Warren Stearns, Massachusetts commissioner of prisons and dean of the Tufts Medical School, was recently a guest at Skatuthaws Farm, the summer residence of Dr. L. Vernon Briggs.

Mrs. Robert G. Stone of Chestnut Hill, is in New York and is staying at the Saint Regis Hotel.

Several small informal parties have been given at the North Shore Garden, Salem, recently and among the guests were Miss Sarah Harvey, of Cleveland, and Mr. Raleigh White, of Texas, who are visiting the Fitzpatricks. Mr. Donald Fitzpatrick was also there. Another frequent visitor at the Garden was Miss Jane Bogardus, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Bogardus, of Swampscott. She is an enthusiastic dancer and her partners include Mr. Isaac Patch, of Gloucester.

BOSTON SCHOOL BOARD HEAD AND WIFE

A brilliant wedding in St. Mary of the Assumption Church, Brookline, today, was that of William A. Reilly, of Jamaica Plain, chairman of the Boston school committee, and Miss Kathryn Mary McElroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward McElroy, of Rawson rd., Brookline. Guests included the Boston school committee, numerous teachers and college friends of the bridegroom, a member of 1924 Boston College class. Following the church ceremony there were a reception and breakfast at Longwood Towers. (Staff photo.)

Mrs. Turner Is Hostess

Mrs. Everett Turner gave a luncheon at the Eel River Beach Club on Thursday. Among those present were Mrs. Alfred Meyer, who wore a becoming blue silk afternoon dress with a soft white collar; Mrs. Sidney Strickland, in a flesh-colored sport costume with a hat to match, and Mrs. Susan Parkwell in a white silk frock with a stylish little blue sport coat and a dark blue and white sport hat.

Mrs. Hafley Loder wore a silk green afternoon frock and a little white hat with a narrow brim.

Mrs. Robert Rand looked charming in a yellow print silk dress with a dainty little horse hair hat.

Mrs. Turner was dressed in a white silk sport suit.

Mrs. Sherman L. Whipple wore a small brimmed, very pretty little white hat with a wine colored afternoon frock, with short sleeves and good looking brown and white sport shoes.

Mrs. Ralph Hornblower, as usual, looked most attractive in a white frock with a broad cape collar and a wide brimmed shade hat that is most becoming to her.

Brookline Girl Weds Reilly

Chairman William A. Reilly of Boston School committee and Miss Kathryn Mary McElroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward McElroy of Rawson rd., Brookline, were married today by Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis A. Burke, chancellor of the archdiocese, in St. Mary of the Assumption church, Brookline.

There were many wedding guests, including all members of the school committee, numerous teachers, and college friends of the bridegroom of the Boston College class of 1924. Miss Mary Curley, daughter of the Mayor, and Joe McKenney, Boston College football coach, were among them. Many priests also were present.

Among the solos sung by Joseph Ecker during the nuptial mass was "Veni Creator," composed by Dr. James A. Reilly of Jamaica Plain, father of the bridegroom.

The couple will sail for Europe on the liner Lafayette from New York on Aug. 30. They will live on Dunster rd., Jamaica Plain.

A wedding breakfast at Longwood Towers followed the services. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Margaret McElroy, of Brookline, as maid of honor, and the following bridesmaids: Miss Esther McCafferty of Everett, Miss Eleanor Kiley of Chestnut Hill, Miss Eleanor Ogar of Dorchester, Miss Mary McElroy of Brookline, Miss Alice Skahan of Belmont and Mrs. John J. Donahue of Lowell. Norbert J. Reilly of Brighton, a brother of Chairman Reilly, was best man.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

In the old, formal days in New York one made dinner calls. Which meant that when you accepted an invitation to dine you practically tied yourself up for 15 minutes of an afternoon, later (and within two weeks), whether you could spare the time or not.

It was a barbarous rule of decorum, but there it was, rigid and firm and inelastic; one of those stupid customs which had to be observed.

* * *

The joke was equally upon the hostess and the guest; for neither desired to receive or to make the dinner call. One cannot think of a more inane idea. A little note of thanks or a box of flowers would not do. A call, in person, had to be made, at no matter what sacrifice of time and energy. A tea party is the bane of any sane male's existence; and the cocktail party of today at five o'clock is equally to be avoided. But, fortunately, as New York grew larger and more informality came into its social life, the dinner call grew to be a thing of the past.

* * *

Too Busy for Calls

Even the casual call, with no previous telephone message of one's impending arrival, is not desired. People are too busy, and few "social leaders" are "at home" any more. They are so busy that their secretaries or butlers do their telephoning for them; and it is no uncommon thing to be invited to "tea by Meadows or Miss Jones, so rough and ready have things become. One grows sympathetic toward the New York hostess who said to a friend:

"Please do not uphraid me for not seeing you oftener. It seems to me that I do nothing but greet relatives and friends at piers—New York being what it is. And I am everlastingly sending flowers to hospitals, attending committee meetings of this and that, sending bath salts and baskets of fruit to steamers, arranging my dinner parties, the complexions of which change utterly hour by hour since so many people have a way of dropping out. It's a terrible whirl, but what are we to do about it?"

* * *

What, indeed, if one allows oneself to be caught in the mesh of social engagements? In smaller cities it must be pleasant to be able to "telephone one's neighbors at the 11th hour and make up a dinner party, with bridge afterward, and capture exactly the right friends. Psychologically, something invariably happens to any formal gathering which must be planned weeks ahead. To know on the first of the month that one must go on the 25th to a certain house spoiled the delight in going.

* * *

Most people in our metropolis complain about their engagements during the day and then energetically keep them in the evening. Yet there are actually those who like to see their engagement books filled to overflowing and who could not live without the excitement of a New York season at its busy height.

* * *

But the old guard drop out, and sometimes completely disappear. They weary of the incessant round of pleasure, of which, naturally, there is not so much just now; and the day always comes when they refuse to attend with any regularity the tiresome functions which make such demands on their time and strength.

Yet a certain formality must exist in a town so cosmopolitan. And the old rule still holds that once an engagement is accepted it must be kept.

* * *

Casual Calls Out

I know a charming hostess who once said to a young bachelor, "If evening please call me up and come and dine en famille." And she meant it. Such an evening came to the young man and he did as he had been bidden.

"Oh!" came the distracted voice over the wire, "if it were any other evening—any other evening at all! But we've arranged a dinner of 13 tonight, and—you are—if you came that would make 13. I know you'll understand. So sorry. Good-by."

* * *

And he did understand, and it was good-by forever to that kind of casual calling up.

* * *

Laxity Normal

Every now and then you will hear one of the old guard deploring the present laxity of society, the letting down of the bars, the painful publicity given to most functions along Fifth and Park aves. Sheer nonsense.

For it is a salutary thing that informality has come into New York drawing rooms; that the old, stiff and insufferable dinners and dances are things of the musty past. There is something normal and healthy and stimulating about the entertainments of today, such as they are where the artist is as welcome as anyone else, and where the old dowagers with their diamonds stomachers are no longer seen.

The next generation is not going to care at all for stuffy entertainments. It will have too much sense and too little money to be bothered with such things.

'Tis True!
Sol Violinsky, vaude violinist, with a sense of humor, says that times have been so tough, with him lately and what with his pawning his fiddle so much that now the pawnbroker plays his violin better than he does!

Welcome Greetings (?)
And the same Violinsky went to the West Coast . . . But while he was waiting patiently for the Powers-That-Be out there to become conscious of him, his pocketbook began to shrink . . . The old bankroll was flat . . . His wife, who remained behind in Gotham, wired him:
"This can't go on. We can't live apart like this" . . .
Sollie wired back: "You're right, if that's the way you feel, you send for me."
However, she managed to arrive unexpectedly on the Coast a bit later . . . Was taking part the Roosevelt hotel when Sollie, who spied her from his lounging post in front of the hotel, yelled: "Ah! On your way to Honolulu, eh?

Being Frank, at Least!
When one of our better pan-handlers, just opposite the Boston Common, asked Fred Waring: "Will you give me nine cents, buddie?" . . . Fred queried: "But why nine cents?" . . . "Well, both of my brothers are working on a 10 per cent cut, so why shouldn't I?"

Could You Expect More?

That Berle Boy!
A recent visiting comic informed us that Milton Berle, the gag-snatcher, never pulls a new gag in his routine until he has sat in someone else's audience and watched the effect of the other fellow's gag on his audience! . . . That Milton is afraid to try a new gag—one that hasn't been tried out somewhere . . . And that Mama Berle, who recently exchanged a few words with Lou Holtz's Mama backstage at the New York Capitol, always sits out-front to watch her son act . . . Whenever she fails to emit a wild shriek of mirth at just the proper time, thus enthusing the audience, whether they like it or not . . . Who said the gals in the business were the ones with the stage "mothers"?

Should It Have Mattered?
"How much do you weigh?" asked La Guinan of one of her undressed blondies. "Exactly 132 pounds," she was informed . . . "Stripped?" tittled Texas . . . "No, the drugstore was crowded," her little chorine answered modestly!

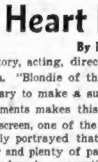
Marion Davies Gives Her Peak Performance in Heart Interest Film

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

'Story, acting, direction—that's the eternal triangle in the cinema. "Blondie of the Follies" has all three in the blending necessary to make a superior picture. Excellence in all three departments makes this photoplay, featured on the Loew's State screen, one of the very best of the year. Its theme is so tellingly portrayed that it is as real as life itself—abundant humor and plenty of pathos, interwoven in the speeding lights and shadows in a narrative that boasts treatment ahead of most Hollywood productions.

• • •

Marion Davies at her best, with a great cast about her; Frances Marion and Anita Loos fashioning the warp and woof of the plot and dialogue, master craftsmen both; and Edmund Goulding—he who put the same skill into "Grand Hotel" —as the director! That's an unbeatable combination—and "Blondie of the Follies" is the rich fruit of its golden talent. Few pictures have been given what Cosmopolitan gives this. That company always puts its everything into its product; good pictures are the rule of its business and its latest is one of its top films.



Marion Davies

Miss Davies is seen as a girl of the tenements. Her pal is Billie Dove, who has tasted of the gay life. These two scrap like cat and dog; their bickerings are usually amusing, sometimes hilarious and later on poignant. Through Billie, who is in the Follies, Miss Davies meets Robert Montgomery, a happy-go-lucky chap, flitting with the butterflies. He takes on Billie as his newest flame.

Montgomery falls for Marion and gets her a job in the chorus. That night she celebrates—her first taste of wine. The tenement home is scandalized; in anger Miss Davies walks out. She puts up with Billie in her swank apartment.

Miss Davies falls in love with Montgomery, and learns that her chum, too, has given him her heart. That brings the girl pals into continuing conflict, they adore one another but there's but one man each seeks. Miss Davies goes the easy way, having promised she would not butt in on her friend's romance. Teeming incident, the ups and downs of life, its joys and its tragic happenings, follow; and the finish is satisfactorily wrought.

The star again proves her right to be called first among the comediennes of screendom; but here must give a show of her ability on the serious side. The demands of the two are exacting; it requires emotional power. Miss Davies meets the test. The piquant beauty reveals dramatic power beyond anything she has hitherto done. She can, when she will, touch the heartstrings, bring the gulp in the throat, beget tears. Her "Blondie" is one of the best of the year's characterizations.

Montgomery makes the swellest sort of leading man opposite her. His fans will like him as the Manhattan playboy, burnt by the very flame with which he had been toying. His ironic touch is a histrionic contributin.

Billie Dove is a new revelation—the beauteous woman acts grandly, and speaks her lines convincingly. She should thank Miss Davies for giving her this chance, wherein she gives proof of her right to motion picture prominence.

The cast glitters with its other gems—Zazu Pitts, Sidney Toler, James Gleason, Jimmy Durante, Douglas Dumbrille, Sarah Padden and Clyde Cook.

Goulding's direction is intelligent and unemphatic. His cameras sweep from odd angles, and imaginatively cast the atmosphere. His tempo is fast. The settings are well-nigh perfect, and in every way "Blondie of the Follies" is brilliant entertainment.

FOOTLIGHT GAIETIES REVEALED IN WEEK'S NEW FILMS

Breakfast for two! Billie Dove and Marion Davies take morning refreshment late, but with more than ordinary luxury, in Cosmopolitan's "Blondie of the Follies," now at Loew's State.

Eclipse Minded

The smart showmen of Cape Cod have determined that a majority of the people in that region will become eclipse-minded next Wednesday, and as a result the regular mid-week matinee at the Cape Playhouse in Dennis and at the Theater Unit in West Falmouth have been diverted. At Dennis the Wednesday matinee will be delivered on Tuesday, at West Falmouth, Thursday.

Chevalier Picture Proves Gaily Bright at Paramount-Uptown

"Love Me Tonight," thanks to Maurice Chevalier, et als, and lavish accessories, is gay entertainment. It's a merry comedy, based upon a French play, cinematically most important in its imitative touches after the manner of the German musicals and Rene Clair of Paris. It boasts a small galaxy of clever performers, each and every one, for the time being, a star.

Beginning the pardon of you, mesdames and messieurs among the ardent Chevalier fans—counting ourselves in your number—our favorite loses something in this one. Our guess is that it is Lubitsch, almost alone among Hollywood directors in his ability to give the unique Chevalier personality the perfect setting it needs, and to touch up properly a story of this type.

Of the songs the most appealing and haunting, is the one whose strain comes in the best part of the picture—"the son of a gun is nothing but a tailor." Here Mamoulian is fairly expert in trailing Clair and the Germans.

That "nothing but a tailor" id a is the cue to the plot. Chevalier is the "best little tailor in France," duped into extending credit to a certain vicomte possessed of a fascinating cousin in Jeanette MacDonald. To get his cash, Chevalier hies to the nobleman's castle. On the way he falls in love with the lass. Then the vicomte passes the hero off as a baron, and he woos in words and music to his heart's content. Until one day he is trapped and the revelation comes.

Your wager is good that it doesn't end unhappily for the sweethearts.

Chevalier never needed Lubitsch more. Rouben Mamoulian's hand is too often heavy; fortunately, not too often, else even the superior merit of these performers, the glamour of the background, the choice music in the story, might have gone drab. Mamoulian knows his atmosphere, understands the imaginative lens. Thus the screen often sings more melodiously than these made-to-order tunes, or the magnificently beauteous Jeanette MacDonald. But, when one remembers Clair and his German contemporaries, Mamoulian appears crude in their company. Lubitsch would have been worthy of his Continental compeers.

Our own Maurice has made better pictures; in our opinion this is his second poorest. Not up to his high standard, he yet is an outstanding actor, head and shoulders above most of them. Yet something is missing. Miss MacDonald is as usual very pleasing save when she attempts self conscious of her love-making. But the larger share of praise lies in the direction of the cast. Charles Ruggles and Butterworth, C. Aubrey Smith, grand oldtimer that he is, and the three ladies who play the aunts. Whenever these figures appear, singly or in groups, the picture perks up, snaps along, holds you, more definitely and vigorously amuses you. Sad to relate, even some of Chevalier's scenes go flat.

It is not to be denied that this picture, now at the Paramount and Uptown, has vast audience values. The work of Chevalier is worth while, even if he be less classy; and those others we have named would make any film delightful. But we still contend that the wrong director was chosen; and that the Lubitsch genius would have made "Love Me Tonight" the best of all American musicals, and a generally great picture—one of the best of the year.

Burlesque Has the 'Spot'

The Empire Burlesque season gets under way at the Old Howard this afternoon. Hinda Wassau, dancing star, is the outstanding attraction. The "Bally-hoo Revue" features nine principals and 16 chorus girls. The cast are Harry (Kash) Fields, Lillian Murray, Jack Lorraine, Russell Trent, Burt Saunders, Dorothy DeHaven, Rosamond May, Thelma Paul.

In addition there are vaudeville acts and talkies. Midnight show tomorrow night at 11:30 p. m.

There will also be a special midnight show on Sunday (Labor Day Eve), with an entire change of program.

Another Big Bill Holds the Stage

By HARRIS MORGAN

Eddie Dowling tops the new vaudeville program at Loew's Orpheum, and, as always, this Boston lad gives a good account of himself. With Eddie is his talented wife, Ray Dooley—like hubby, a grand performer. Together the two get a tremendous reception, which they deserve. All the acts are superfine, making another score for Manager Victor Morris' Big Name shows.

• • •

As Eddie Dowling and Ray Dooley, respectively, the famous pair from the musical stage are individualists in their ability to entertain. Each cavorts about the stage with all the nuances and smartness which have been acquired in brim-full stage careers. Mr. Dowling is a comedian of the easy-going, unobtrusive school, while Miss Dooley is his direct opposite. Both, however, are more than capable in the matter of gathering laughs and in their ability to keep an audience entertained. Mr. Dowling is still telling the amusing story about the Irishwoman at the theatre, which, despite its familiarity, still retains its fine humor. Miss Dooley gingerly clowns about the stage and is especially effective in her "kid" number. Each sings several songs, being accompanied at the piano by J. Fred Coots, the well-known songwriter.

The remainder of the bill boasts of high quality vaudeville. Most important of the surrounding acts is the turn offered by Collins and Peterson, rapid-fire comedians, who have an uproarious skit in which they banter repartee and quips; Adler and Bradford, known as the originators of the mind-reading magic, a whirlwind exhibition of this style of the dance; a quintet of delightful singers known as "The Radiolites" in a program of popular songs, and Bob and Margie DuPont in their pleasing comedy skit.

John Gilbert is author, as well as star, of the screen attraction, "Downstairs." A cast including his bride, Virginia Bruce, Paul Lukas, Olga Baclanova, Hedda Hopper and Lucien Littlefield support him.

Constance Bennett on Screen, Reri Shines on Met's Stage

Pit a lass from the South Seas against an Occidental screen queen and see what happens! Bewitching Reri from far-flung Tahiti is put in the arena at the Metropolitan, to match her talents against the lure of Constance Bennett in the feature picture. It's a royal set-to—Connie is superb, Reri is scintillant, and neither lass is worsted. Nobody's hair is mussed—both achieve distinction.

• • •

Miss Bennett is seen in "Two Against the World," another good picture out of the Warner studios. Her admirers will revel in this one, and the women will find much to copy in the line of gowns and lingerie, not to mention a new dressing of the hair, whereby Miss Bennett attains the once popular bangs.

The star is at her best as a society girl in love with a young lawyer (Neil Hamilton). When her sister gets into trouble, and a brother commits murder, Connie goes to bat, takes the blame, and acts it through in telling fashion. Her lies save the killer, and soon the lawyer is leaning on the spot to claim his bride.

As in her two most recent pictures, Miss Bennett keeps in general to the lighter vein of acting wherein she shines exceedingly bright. The cast, especially Alan Mowbray and Mr. Hamilton, is excellent. Archie Mayo's direction is deft.

• • •

Now you should see Reri! This paragon of beauty from the Papeete you know from travel and fiction, is a talented girl. She doesn't depend on the fact that she appeared in the movies and in the Ziegfeld Follies, for attention: that dances so niftily and talks and sings so neatly, that she establishes her own place on these Met boards. She is worth the feature place accorded her.

The stage revue is "Mystery," snappy and very colorful. Tommy Maran's "finds," the four blue diamonds, sing; and Mr. Sevitzsky again triumphantly leads his orchestra, to the huge delight of the audience. He is one of the best of all the theater batoniers.

Bill Headed by Song Writers

The vaudeville bill at the Publix Scollay will be headed Monday by Harry Pease and Ed Nelson, song writers, who will do singing, comedy and piano numbers, assisted by Ora Dawson and Thelma McCoy. Among the many hits that the boys have written are "I Apologize," "Auf Wiedersehen, My Dear," "Peggy O'Neil," "The Pal That I Loved, Stole The Gal That I Loved," "Ten Little Fingers and Ten Little Toes," and "When a Black Man's Blue."

Joel MacCrea Paired With Janet Gaynor for "Tess of Storm Country"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Aug. 27—Replacing Charlie Farrell as Janet Gaynor's leading man isn't as simple as it sounds. The dear public is so accustomed to seeing Janet and Charlie together, any substitute has to be a popular leading man. Lew Ayres was the original choice for "Tess of the Storm Country," the next Gaynor picture, but Lew took to boating. He was A. W. O. L. when he was wanted.

Louella O. Parsons

Joel McCrea, Radio's gift to the feminine audiences, was borrowed by Winfield Sheehan for "Tess." Joel ought to be acceptable. The girls like him. The Mary Pickford fans are especially interested in "Tess of the Storm Country" since it is the one picture that Mary thought well enough of to bring to the screen twice.

* * *

Maybe it didn't do Lew Ayres any harm to hold out. As soon as he came back from his boating trip he was handed the script of "Man Without Fear," the story of a Spanish bull fighter. Lew likes these he-man stories and he has constantly registered a complaint against having too many love stories. The story is by Tom Kilpatrick, who has just returned from Seville with movies of two of the biggest bull fights of the season for atmospheric stuff. Tay Garnett will direct this particular bull fight tale which, we are told, bears no relation to Eddie Cantor's "Kid from Spain."

* * *

Powell Falls Hard

Talk about a busman's holiday! William Powell spent all Wednesday evening at the Columbia studio watching a certain blonde emote. Seems he is hard hit with the girl. As for her, she shamelessly kissed him before all the company. The girl, perhaps you have heard of her, Carole Lombard, remains at Columbia for another picture in spite of the way she carried on with Bill Powell. As soon as she finishes "Virtue," her present vehicle, she will go in for a session of fitting expensive clothes for "No More Orchids," the Grace Perkins story recently published in a current magazine.

Sally and Hoot Busy

Sometimes it is a good thing for both members of a family to work. Keep each of them out of mischief. Sally Eilers has been very busy working night and day in "Hat Check Girl" at Fox, working in spite of a severe cold. "Hoot" Gibson will be equally busy from now on, for he starts his own picture, "Cowboy Counselor," for M. H. Hoffman Co. George Melford, pioneer director and one of the first directors to make feature dramas, is directing "Hoot" in his horse opera. The girl who is rescued by our brave cowboy hero will be played by Sheila Manners, a pretty youngsters who has appeared in a number of current Hollywood pictures.

A Job for Actress

A perfectly good job and an interesting one awaits a Hollywood screen actress of about 25. The Nelson Vondeur Films, producing "Don Quixote" near Paris, cables to ask for help in obtaining an actress to play opposite Chaliapin. John Farrow is co-director and, according to our cable, there is a bankroll back of the production. DeWolf Hopper was starred in "Don Quixote" years and years ago, long before the advent of the talkies. Wonder if Chaliapin sings? What actress is there available who can accept this Paris offer?

* * *

A Line or Two

A persistent report is current in Hollywood that an heir is expected at the Richard Dix home. No verification of the report. Dorothy Peterson, who has probably played more wife and mother roles than any other actress in Hollywood, draws the role of Charlie Laughton's wife in "Payment Deferred." Marian Nixon was hurriedly put in to "Jubilo," Will Rogers' picture, in place of Nell O'Day. The substitution was made after it became apparent it was important to have a name in the one-girl role. Clive Brook is definitely set as the male lead in "Cavalcade." It's his second picture for Fox.

Great Picture on the Bill

Featured in the third week of "Greater Show Season" at RKO Keith's is the film based on Fannie Hurst's novel, "Back Street," a genuinely moving love drama. It is delicately, poignantly and compellingly told. For 20 years, the attachment endures, ever increasing in intensity, until a tragedy brings the affair to a close.

Heading the vaudeville bill is the one and only Bill Robinson. He brings with him a company of fast stepping "Brown Buddy" girls, together with Putney Dandridge and Jackie Young.

Another of the acts is the radio team of Eddie and Ralph, known to millions as "Sisters of the Skillet," "500 pounds of harmony and a million pounds of fun." Surrounding acts are Bobby Pinkus in his skit, "Getting Her"; Marion Chase and Mildred MacDonald, personality singers; the Wing Wah Troupe in a thrilling exhibition of oriental skill, and Joe Bell and Sister, presenting their act, "Walking on Air."

Bowdoin Square

At the Bowdoin Square Theater for the first half of the week will be a bill that comprises standard vaudeville of seven acts, together with a double picture program. The leading film is Lionel Barrymore in "Washington Masquerade," a story of the "lobbyist racket" in Washington. The cast includes Karen Morley and Nils Asther. The associate film has Leo Carrillo in "Laca of the Rio Grande," with Dorothy Burgess, Slim Summerville and John Mack Brown.

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow the Gayety's screen attraction will feature Edward G. Robinson in "Two Seconds" with Vivienne Osborne, and "Sunshine Susie" with Renate Muller and Jack Hulbert. Five vaudeville acts are also on the bill.

'OR-ELSE' SYSTEM MORE SERIOUS THAN STOCKS

By GILBERT SELDES

The "or-else" system of getting out of the depression has made headway during the past few weeks and is in full operation in Nebraska and Iowa, where a farmers' strike is in progress. If I were the President, or even a candidate for the presidency, I would pay more attention to this new development than to the nine-point rise in the stock market; what goes up, they told us in 1929, has to come down; but spilt milk sells at nothing a quart. The striking farmers are picketing roads leading to the great market cities to prevent shipments of milk, livestock and produce from reaching the wholesalers; the governor of Minnesota is in sympathy with the strike; the police of Sioux City are upholding the law and helping trucks run the blockade. Is this war or prosperity?

GILBERT SELDES

As a matter of fact, it is nullification—a word and idea to which we have grown accustomed in the East by our constant nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment. It occurs in private life. A few days ago a friend told me that he had offered to renew the lease on his apartment if the landlord would give him a reduction. The landlord—singular fellow—refused. A lawyer could only advise the tenant to pay as much as he could afford, giving him the consolation of crowded courts—any suit for the balance due would not come up for about two years. So my friend is paying about half the rental agreed upon; the other half he is nullifying. Take what you can get is the slogan, or else—

I think the governor of Oklahoma, Alfalfa Bill Murray, was one of the earliest practitioners of this system. Oil was selling at a price which displeased the owners; yet the operators would not come to any agreement on limiting production. The governor took action. He established an artificial—and satisfactory—price for oil and, for a time, saw to it that oil was not sold below that price. Oklahoma had a second honeymoon with prosperity. I doubt whether the marriage was legal and am afraid that a separation has since occurred.

It is remarkable that the farmers of the Middle West can't bring themselves to believe in the kind care of our government; they somehow will not understand that the salvaging of the bankers is really intended to help the farmer. In their hard, obstinate way they insist that they will not sell grain and cows except at a profit. They have the odd idea that since they honestly are willing to salute the flag, pay governmental salaries and suffer depressions they ought to participate in the new prosperity of the country. Perhaps they also remember that 10 months before the panic in Wall Street the troubles of the farmer had been talked about in campaign speeches; perhaps they think four years is a long, long time.

Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, arguing for "birth selection" rather than birth control, notes that in the last eight years of prosperity (1920-28) over a hundred million human beings had been added to the population as one of the sources of our present discontent. Yet birth control, in its present state, seems a doubtful agency to him because it is not selective, or, if it is selective, works the wrong way, the upper classes limiting their offspring, the riff-raff not. "I have in mind," he says, "the French among whom birth control has been practised in the upper classes for centuries with disastrous racial results."

The best people are as much out of work as the worst at this moment; they eat as much (or would like to); they disturb the economic balance of the world just as much. If you are going to argue for the limitation of births you might as well admit that the children of the best people may turn out wasters and scoundrels and that the sons and daughters of the poor and the oppressed write good books, make bridges, conduct excellent military maneuvers and (given the chance) make good and prosperous citizens.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

A Columnist Is Fired!

(During his vacation, Mister Sobol imposes upon his admiring public by reprinting columns of his earlier days.)

They handed Louis Sobol two—weeks' pay Saturday afternoon and fired him. The boss was nice about it.

"We all like you personally, Louis," he said. "But in the interests of circulation we'll have to let you go. You know, my boy, it's just the old case of esprit de corps. Here, have a cigarette."

Old Man Sobol slunk out in his best slinking manner. Shoulders erect, chest out, the famous wistful smile playing around his lips. He was out, but not down. You can't keep a Sobol down. Sobols have been massacred, Sobols have been hanged by the neck until dead, Sobols have been thrown out of the snootiest hotels, but no Sobol has ever been kept down for long.

On Monday a contemporary announced in his column that the Bloated Plute and The Journal had "pfffft." Wednesday's issue of Variety explained in detail the circumstances attending the dismissal of the popular young columnist. All Broadway knew that Sobol was out of a job.

But the boy refused to be ejected. Any day now he knew that one or the other of newspapers would come clamoring for his services. As soon as Adolph Ochs, of the Times, or Roy Howard, of the Telegram, learned he was available, they'd come bidding for him. Meanwhile he was determined to stick to his usual routine.

He dropped into the Hollywood. There was genial Carl, the head waiter. Good old Carl. Always smiling and cordial. Something was wrong with Carl tonight, however. He was in a blue funk. The cordiality was missing. There was no gleam of recognition in his eyes, no rushing forward to usher Old Man Sobol to a ringside table. The ex-columnist slumped into a chair way in back. He'd wait until N. T. G. spotted him. Good old N. T. G. He waited, but Granny, who saw everybody, didn't see him tonight. What was the matter with everybody?

Broadway's mutineer, still undaunted, walked out, snapping his fingers. It was all a mistake at the Hollywood. He wouldn't hold it against them. He went to the Club Abbey. Mavis, the hat check gal, tossed him a curt "Hello" and turned away. Poor kid. She must be sick.

He went over to Guinan's. If all other people failed him, Texas wouldn't. Good old, cheery Texas. Funny if she even gave him a gag tonight. But the Guinan gal kept her eyes straight to the front.

The days passed. Bravely Sobol entered Sardi's. Renee Carroll handed him a hat check. That was the first bitter blow. Vincent Sardi walked away from him. That was the second. The third was more than he could bear. They had removed Gard's libellous caricature of him and substituted Cora La Redd's. At their usual table the press agents were. None shouted to come over and join them. None of them rose and approached him to whisper a piece of confidential gossip or a yarn. At Gerson's grill his gold-lettered name had been removed from its panel. At Reuben's he was stuck in a corner away from every one and everything. At Dave's the waiter spilled water on his lap without drawing a rebuke from Dave.

More days passed. No telegram came from Mr. Ochs. No telegram came from Mr. Howard. No telegram came from Mr. Patterson.

More days passed. Sobol was in a bad way. Rent was due. Natalie needed a pair of new shoes. The telephone company was threatening to yank out the 'phone. Old Man Sobol, frayed at the cuffs, but cleanly shaven, decided upon desperate measures. He would look for a job. He made his first appeal to the paper which had fired him. The man at the desk stared at him coldly. "The Boss is very busy," he said. The ex-columnist persisted, however, wore him down, and reluctantly he took in his card. Over the partition floated the busy editor's reply, "Sobol? Sobol, eh? Well, who in God's name is he? Tell him we're not hiring any hiring today." Crest fallen, the lad started to leave. In the hallway he noticed two of his former confreres huddled over a page in The Journal. "Hell's bells!" chuckled one of them. This fellow Smith is turning out the greatest Broadway column in town. I wonder what's become of that funny looking guy he succeeded—you know—I can't remembef his name."

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Last Hope -:- -:- -:- -:- By Burris Jenkins, Jr.

A Bit on Boxing, Baseball and Beef Steak

AD ZACHOW, WHO some of the excited cauliflower gentry say is the greatest fighter that has come out o' the State of Maine since Mysterious Billy Smith, has rushed in where others fear to tread. Since Lou Brouillard handed that New York shellacking to the great Jimmy McLarnin all the other welters and near welters have been avoiding the Worcester southpaw l ike the smallpox. But the manager of young Zachow has accepted a match with Brouillard at the Boston Garden. Apparently Zachow's backers have a sublime faith in the wallop of the youngster, who rocked Leo Larrivee, the New England champion, into the arms of Morphens. Most of the boxing addicts, however, think that Zachow prematurely is being rushed into a match, which he is not yet seasoned for and which will result in his getting a serious setback. This humble scribe, who has been looking 'em over long enough to know his fistic onions, leans to the view that Zachow needs more seasoning and experience before taking on a foeman of Brouillard's caliber. Billy Ames, the matchmaker, who paired Lou and Ad, takes the stand in rebuttal. Here's Bill on the air now:

"There comes a time when every young boxer has to take a chance," declares Billy. "That time has arrived for Zachow. He has fought his way up and now is New England champion. The door into the Big Money is opened to him in the Brouillard match. Zachow is a young, sturdy, natural hitter. He hits short and sharp and is of the type who is likely to knock out any one in front of him. If he stops Brouillard, or even makes a good showing against him, he will step right into fame and fortune. Zachow has just the kind of a right hand puch to beat a southpaw. It is the chance of a lifetime for Zachow and who can criticize the youngster for taking it? His backers discountenance Brouillard's victory over McLarnin, saying that Jimmy is getting old as fighters go, hadn't a fight for a year previous to the Brouillard match and stepped in rusty and stableworn against the rugged Worcester walloper. Zachow is no stableworn veteran. He is a rough, tough, rugged slugger with a punch snappy enough to knock anyone out of their brogans. If you ask me, Brouillard and the fight fans who think Lou is a cinch to beat Ad are mighty likely to get the surprise of their lives."

BLI ME, BILLY, Old Cove, you may be right, but when Benny Leonard, who has made a wonderful comeback, declines to get in the same ring with Brouillard and takes on Lou's victim, Jimmy McLarnin, instead, and Jack Thompson also refuses to give the Worcester man another crack at the title, it looks as if others think the same as we do, that Brouillard is the greatest welter in the ring. If you ask us, Billy, Old Top, we believe that Brouillard can go through the middleweights just as he has through the welters. Brouillard is a southpaw. He's an experienced "switch hitter," too. It takes more than a hard hitting right hand to beat fighters of the Brouillard type. We think young Zachow is in for a chastising, just how hard a chastising depending on Brouillard's mood. If Lou is feeling right pert he is likely to knock young Ad's block off. Now Ad may prove us all wrong, Willie, but if he does, we'll be the first to doff our bonnet to him.

CUBS AND YANKEES in the World Series. That's the baseball situation, now, unless Charlie Grimm's outfit explodes as if hit by a shower of Al Capone's pineapples and the Yankees show an even more amazing reversal of form. The Dodgers still threaten, but it looks as if their pennant chances were frittered away on Dazzy Vance's sore arm. Which all touches upon and appertains to the fact that old Dazz certainly misses Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson. In a fanning bee last winter Dazz remarked, "I'm old enough and experienced enough to know all the pitching ropes but I don't know what I'd do without Uncle Robbie. When my arm went bad last spring I followed Robbie's instructions and before long I was going good as ever. There's no one on the map who can handle pitchers like Uncle Robbie."

SPEAKING OF VANCE reminds us of the story Frankie Graham tells of the Dazzler and Baby Doll Jacobsen. In a winter barnstorming game in California, Jacobsen was up and the Dazzler in the box. Baby Doll jumped half way to the bench on the Dazzler's first offering, which sailed to the plate for a strike. Jacobsen staggered all over the batter's box in trying to avoid the next one which also cut the corner of the platter. Then came a fast breaking curve and Jacobsen fell flat on his face.

"Strike three!" bawled the umpire, "Yer out!"

"Yes," snorted Baby Doll down there in the dirt, "and —— glad of it!"

ROGERS HORNSBY'S return to his farm seems to have ended the feud that has existed between the Dodgers and the Cubs for more than a year. The war started more than a year ago when Charlie Root, apparently acting under Hornsby's orders, bean balled the Dodgers almost to death. At the start of this season the Cubs pursued the same tactics, Root, Grimes, Bush and Warnecke having the Dodgers jumping for their lives. It was only natural the Dodgers should come back. When the Cubs came to Brooklyn the war was on in earnest. In the first game, Grimm was spiked at first. In the second, Watty Clark twice beaned Hornsby. In the third game, Lopez, charging into second, knocked Bill Jurgess into the outfield. Later in the same game Gabby Hartnett got his arm up just in time to "block" a bean ball and was put hors de combat with an injured elbow. Both teams were at battle edge in the fourth game and a slugging soiree among Micky Finn, Jurgess and English wound up in a free-for-all in which everyone got in. "Cut out the bean ball," was Grimm's first orders when he succeeded Hornsby. With the cutting out of the bean ball the Dodgers seem to have declared a truce.

WALTER SEAVER, Len Prior's right hand bower at the Hotel Lenox, vouches for Juan Zabala's meat-eating proclivities "They call the little Olympic Marathon champion the Broncho of the Pampas," laughs Seaver, "but I'll say he certainly is a 'hoss' for eating! He isn't content with one steak at his meals, but must have two. Some of the Finns have the idea that vegetarians make the best Marathon runners but this wonderful little Argentine runner explodes the theory."

All right Walter, let's go out and eat a couple of steaks and see if we can win a Marathon.

PIRATES OPEN SERIES WITH BRAVES

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 27—After a two-day loaf, the Boston Braves resume hostilities here, this afternoon, when they open a four-game series with the Pirates.

Neither of these erstwhile pennant-contenders has a chance for first money but each has high hopes of grabbing second dough, which is nothing to be sneezed at these days. Or any other time, for that matter.

The Bucs hold the upper hand, at present, being only a half game behind the runner up berth, while the Braves, in fifth, trail the Dodgers by 3½ games.

McKECHNIE CONFIDENT

The visitors, though, according to Manager Bill McKechnie, will take at least three out of four in this series, which will leave them only a game back of the Cornsirs, and then sweep past the local entry, the Dodgers and the Phils during their long stay at Braves Field, which will open a week from today.

McKechnie has a kindly feeling in his heart for the Pirates. He used to manage the club and is a resident of Wilkinsburg, a suburb of Smoky Town. But this will not deter him from doing everything in his power to hand the natives four lickings in a row.

Both McKechnie and George Gibson, local pilot, deserve much credit for the showing of their respective clubs this season, regardless of where they finish.

STAYED IN FLAG HUNT

Both the Braves and Pirates were hopeless second division outfits last season and both were in the thick of the current flag hunt from the opening gun until a week or so ago.

McKechnie could use almost any of his flingers today, none of them having worked since Wednesday. He may change his mind at the last moment, but at this writing he plans to shoot Ed Brandt, his star southpaw, against the Bucs, who don't do so well against portside flingers.

Brandt is anxious to equal his record of last season, when he won 18 games. He now has 14 victories to his credit.

The Warriors will introduce two new members to Pittsburgh fandom today, Baxter "Buck" Jordan, from Baltimore, at first base, and "Dutch" Holland, from Seattle, in left field. Both youngsters have been playing fine ball for the invaders.

Wrestling Results

At Harrisburg, Pa.—Ray Steele, 213, Glendale, Cal., threw George Marshall, 235, Los Angeles, 1h11f.

Cubs Can Coast to Pennant

Einstein, himself, could hardly mathematically root a rival past the Clan of Grimm. Anybody else that tries it is out of his head.

CUBS HARDLY CAN LOSE

If the leaders should win 24 of their remaining 33 games, which isn't unreasonable to assume considering the pace they are setting at present, they couldn't lose if the Dodgers won all of their remaining 28 games, which they aren't going to do.

Should the Cubs win only 16 out of 33, or less than half, the Canaymen would have to win 21 out of 28 to win out.

Providing the Dodgers complete the season at a .600 clip much faster than any club in the circuit has been able to travel to date, the Cubs would need to play only at a .390 gait to stay in front.

WINDY CITY TO GET SERIES

Nothing but a record breaking slump on the part of the Cubs and a miracle spurt on the part of the Dodgers can prevent a portion of the 1932 world's series being served to Windy City fans.

They made a clean sweep of their series with the Dodgers, when they were in danger of being caught, they have lost only one game during their current stay at home and they have captured 18 out of 23 games since Charlie Grimm became their pilot.

ALEXANDER SET ON WINNING THE BATTING CROWN

By JOE CASHMAN

"Too bad to leave this pulpit vacant just because 'Deacon' MacFayden has gone to New York," remarked J. Smead Jolley, he of the hot feet, as he daintily stepped across the Fenway clubhouse today and tripped over the soap box that bespeckled Danny was wont to occupy almost daily as a Sox.

"Either somebody should mount the platform or the d—m thing ought to be thrown out of here. When it's unoccupied, I'm continually falling over it and these dogs of mine aren't built for that kind of punishment."

"Well, if you are looking for volunteer 'barkers,' you need look no fur-ther," chimed the big Dale Alexander.

So Dale up-turned the box and began

"When I came to the Sox," he said "the first thing I did was to buy myself a few record books and learn a little something about the past history of my new club.

Allison and Van Ryn Favored to Retain National Title

With their national doubles crown and the ornate silver mug that is the tangible symbol thereof at stake, Wilmre Allison and Johnny Van Ryn face Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill across the court at the Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill, today.

In an almost overnight shift, the defending champions are regarded slight favorites to retain the title. Until today it was generally thought that Vines and Gledhill would carry the championship away with them to California, via Forest Hills.

But in a match between the defending champions and the No. 2 seeded team, there is little on which to base a certain prediction one way or the other. Few expected the French team of Cochet and Bernard to extend the Vines-Gledhill tandem as they did.

CHAMPIONS RESTED

Certainly Allison and Van Ryn, with a full day's rest before entering the finals bracket, can thank the French stars for giving the California challengers an exhausting semifinal match.

Vines was far from right in his bid to enter the final, and his partner Gledhill was forced to carry most of the burden in eliminating Cochet and Bernard.

This 31st disputing of the national doubles title is certain to bring out superlative tennis, no matter which team wins. Both pairs are almost equals in court strategy. If the color is with Vines and Gledhill, the finesse is with Allison and Van Ryn.

1:30—National Father and Sons, Jones and Jones; Burns and Burns.

1:30—National veterans, Rosenbaum and Baggs vs. Adams and Beaaford.

3:15—National doubles, Allison and Van Ryn vs. Vines and and Gledhill.

3:30—National mixed doubles, Vines and Helen Jacobs vs. Perry and Sarah Palfrey.

The challengers are fighters from start to finish. When they were down two sets to one to the French team, it looked like the Californians were ready to fold up for the day, especially since neither seemed able to play even his ordinary game. Still they came back to win.

Three other national titles will be decided today in addition to the national doubles. Finals in the veterans the father-and-son, and the mixed doubles are scheduled today.

Defeated in attempt at revenge on Ellsworth Vines, Henri Cochet left Boston today for Forest Hills, L. I., where he will be Vines' chief challenger for the national singles honors. There, brethren, is a match that would be worth going miles to see.

ZABALA HAS ROCKINGHAM REMEASURED

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Juan Zazala, the fleet but also temperamental son of the Argentine, who raced to victory in the Olympic Marathon and hopes to do the same in the big International Marathon at Rockingham tomorrow, had the A. A. U. officials and the Olympic Club working overtime today.

This was due to Zabala's discovering the fact that a remeasuring of the track and official approval by the registration committee would be necessary for official recognition if he should break any of the intermediate distance records in tomorrow's marathon.

NURMI TO START RACE

So the members of the registration committee hastily were assembled late last night and their approval of Zabala's intermediate distance record attempt given. This morning surveyors were rushed to Rockingham to stake out the different mile points so the little Argentinian could try for Nurmi's intermediate distance records.

It is an irony of Fate that Nurmi himself will fire the starting gun in the race in which Zabala will attempt to wipe more of the Flying Finn's records off the books.

Pitted against the little Broncho of the Pampas will be one of the greatest Marathon fields ever assembled. Included in the pack, Nurmi will send on its way, are four former Boston Marathon victors, Clarence DeMar, Paul DeBruyn, Jimmie Henigan and old Bill Kennedy, the Running Bricklayer, who dropped his hod and raced to victory in a Boston Marathon almost two decades ago.

FAST FIELD IN RUN

Oh, how Nurmi had hoped that he would be able to race himself. And to believe in New York that the New England Association would carry on his fight for reinstatement and permit him to race as an amateur the Flying Finn came to Boston only to find his hopes blasted. In tribute to the greatest runner of the last two decades Nurmi was given the honor of sending the big pack out on the trail tomorrow.

It will take a Zabala in the pink of condition to lead home as representative a field of Marathoners as will answer Nurmi's gun tomorrow. And it is hard to see how Zabala, after the round of banquets, celebrations and camera posing, can be at the top of his form.

Ernie Schaaf Due in Chicago Today

TEN STARTERS IN GOLD CUP

Chicago, Aug. 27 (INS)—Ten horses are scheduled to whizz from the starting stall at Hawthorne this afternoon and flight it out through 10 gruelling furlongs for fame, equine immortality, a portion of a $25,000 purse and the historic $2500 Hawthorne gold cup.

The entries are from along the Atlantic seaboard and the others are Westerners. One of the invaders is expected to keep intact the Eastern record of winning all of Hawthorne's gold cups.

Faireno, owned by William Woodward of New York, who also owns a zipper of yesteryear, known as Gallant Fox, will go to the post an 8 to 5 favorite. Second choice will be Gusio, which won the $70,000 Arlington classic and the $50,000 American Derby, and also is New York owned.

46-Year-Old Jockey Is Victor

Cleveland, Aug. 27 (AP)—It was a kind of disgrace to have a horse eligible for the sixth race at Bainbridge today—a race for horses that hadn't won since May 20. But 46-year-old Joe Dreyer just had to show the kids how to ride his bay Bag O' Gold.

Even so, fellow owners smiled when he swung into the saddle.

Silent Vote, the favorite, led the field on the getaway for the mile and one-sixteenth race, but Joe moved Bag O' Gold into prominence after passing the halfway mark.

Then in the home stretch he let her have—chuckings! He seemed to be whispering to her as he passed Bushy C. and finally the 70 to 1 shot, Tom Ward, to win.

Bag O' Gold is the three-year-old daughter of Baggenbaggage and Margaret Ross, but spectators and fellow owners really believed Old Joe won the race—by clucking instead of going to the whip.

B. C. SQUAD OFF TOMORROW

The first Boston College football squad to leave University Heights for a preseason training session will start for Jackson, N. H., for the 600-acre camp, which will harbor it until Sept. 16, tomorrow morning.

Headed by Coach Joe McKenney, the group will board a special train from the North Station. Of 33 on the squad 23 are veterans of at least a year's experience, eight are from last fall's freshman team and two, Tosi and Plausse, were 1931 ineligibles.

COUCH MEETS MORELAND

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 27 (INS)—The 1932 Western amateur golf crown was at stake today as 21-year-old Gus Moreland of Dallas, Tex., encountered 28-year-old Ira Couch of Chicago in the final 36-hole match of the 33d annual tournament.

Both contenders earned their right to compete in the title round by virtue of victories in close and furious semifinal battles.

MORELAND BEATS SEAVER.

Moreland reached the final by conquering Charley Seaver of Los Angeles, Stanford football player and member of the Walker Cup team, one up on the 36th green.

The Chicagoan's semifinal triumph was a stroke of vengeance, for it was none other than Johnny Lehman, his fellow townsman, who fell before Couch's determined assault, 3 and 2. Two years ago Lehman defeated Couch to win the prized Western amateur title.

Another Alex Story. They Come Fast, but So Did His Swift One.

Beware of Mr. Ware! How Legends Grow— And Heroes Are Made.

THE LEGEND OF ALEX THE GREAT

A correspondent from Chicago sends another story to be added to the legend that is fast being built up around the careless figure of Grover Cleveland Alexander, sometimes known as Alex the Great. I do not vouch for this story, because, if my own memory is not in error, old Pete struck out Tony Lazzeri with his sinker ball, same being his Sunday pitch, but this is the correspondent's yarn, and from this point forward he is stuck with it.

"I went out the other night," he writes, "to see a semi-pro ball game between a local club and those traditional rivals of the Barber College, the House of Davids.

"The H of D's starting pitcher was being handed a rough shave about the time I reached the park, and pretty soon the manager was waving him out of there and waving another chucker in. I didn't pay much attention until the new pitcher reached the circle of light that marked the infield, and then I sat bolt upright and began to take notice.

"You've guessed it, of course. It was Grover Alexander, and, as he came sauntering toward the mound, I could have shut my eye and pictured him walking in to face Tony Lazzeri on that Sunday afternoon at the Yankee Stadium in '26. He was the same old Alex, but not quite as dilatory in his tactics as he had been on that other afternoon.. Or maybe it just seemed longer. I remember that Sunday I kept thinking they would call the game on account of darkness before he got in there and got ready to pitch.

"His arm rose and fell with the same jerky motion and he didn't waste any energy winding up. If you'll recall, he never did. A sort of matter of fact pitcher Alex was, always. He pitched it and you hit it if you could and that was all there was to it. He didn't throw in any extra gestures or gyrations.

"Anyhow, taking advantage of the fact that he was back on the lots where a fan gets much closer to his heroes than in a big league park, I went down to see him in the dressing room after the game, and he told this story about the time he struck out Lazzeri with the bases full to win St. Louis its first world's championship.

The High, Hard One:

"'I took all the time I could getting in from the bullpen because I knew the wait wasn't going to hurt me and might bear down on a young fellow like Tony. I warmed up with slow stuff, sinkers and soft ones, while Lazzeri stood there just outside the batter's box and watched them float by. Then I signaled that I was ready and he stepped in there to take his cut.

"'I fed him three low curves around the knees and he fouled them off. Then I took a deep breath and fired away with my fast ball across his letters. He swung and missed, and I started for the bench.

"'There wasn't much to the ninth inning. Ruth walked, but O'Farrell threw him out stealing with a perfect peg to Hornsby and it was our series. We were a happy gang when we got to the dressing room I can tell you, and everybody was pounding me on the back and yelling and singing.

"'"Pretty good, Pete," Jim Bottomley yelled at me, "what was that last one you threw to Lazzeri?"

"'"My high hard one," I told him, 'and you should have heard that gang yell. You'd have thought I couldn't have broken a pane of glass with my fast ball the way they hollered and kidded me.

"'Of course, it was all in fun and as soon as we left the Stadium to grab a train for St. Louis they forgot all about it. Not me though, I kept thinking about that laugh.

"'Well, the ride to St. Louis is a long one even when you are going back champions of the world and after eating my dinner I dozed off. For a stretch of a few miles the automobile road runs parallel with the tracks and then it turns and crosses over to the other side. Just at the turn there's a big sign that reads: SLOW—CURVE. I woke just in time to see this sign and before I knew it I had yelled out loud: "Slow curve hell, that was a fast ball.'"

Why He Was So Cleanly:

Probably more stories have been told about old Alex and that Saturday night before, and Sunday of, the last game of the '26 series, and I was reading only recently in the papers where Pete said he wasn't tipsy when he went in to save the day for the National League.

He wasn't. But if he didn't have a morning-after-the-night-before head on him that was a honey, it was no fault of the brand of muciage they were peddling around this town in those days. The truth is Alex hadn't the faintest idea he would be called on to pitch on Sunday after winning Saturday's game, and so started his celebration prematurely. Nor did Hornsby expect to have to call on him.

But it's just as well to be on the safe side and when the team left the Alamac Hotel for the Stadium that day, Rogers left Clyde Ware behind to rout Alex out of the hay andget him on the job by game time. Well, he did.

Ware had a terrible time getting Pete started, due chiefly to the fact that he kept finding some excuse to get back in the bathroom every time they were ready to leave. This finally roused Clyde's suspicions and he followed him in to find Alex excavating a pint from underneath some soiled towels.

This, Ware confiscated temporarily and locked up in a suitcase. By now it was getting on to game time and so they set forth, Alex insisting that he didn't need any breakfast, anyway, that he could beat the Yankees on an empty stomach if need be. But he had no idea that he was going to have to do it.

Somewhere on their travels he picked up a ham sandwich, which was the extent of his eating up to the time he toed the rubber. When the game started he went to the bullpen and was sitting there in the sun half asleep when Jess Haines hurt his finger and Hornsby began to wigwag furiously for all the pitchers he had out there to warm up.

Even then Alex had no idea he would be called. .Wee Willie Sherdel was first relief and when Haines started for the bench, Sherdel picked up his sweater coat and started for the mound. Hornsby waved him back.

"He wants you," Sherry said to Alex.

"Not me," said Alex, "you."

So Sherdel started a second time, and a second time Rog wigwagged for the right-hander. So they finally got him started reluctantly toward fame. Which is the way more than one man has gone to meet fame, not being able to differentiate a good break from a bad one. But little things like that make heroes.

Take it away, sonny.

BRITISH ARE STRONGEST IN YEARS

By BILL GRIMES

Apparently there is no rest for the weary golfers, for next week, coming right on the heels of one of the most strenuous weeks of the season, is booked solid.

After a lapse of two years, the British and American Walker Cup teams will go into action next Thursday morning at The Country Club. Although the Britons have been at Brookline for a week, the Americans are not due to report until tomorrow, but George T. Dunlap, former intercollegiate titleholder, has been here for three days.

U. S. TEAM IN DANGER

The coming Walker Cup matches will be the seventh staged between England and the United States. Back in 1921 an informal match was played. Later that year Herbert Walker donated the now famous international trophy, which the Americans have successfully defended six times.

Unless the Britons become overgolfed between now and Thursday, due to their strenuous preparation, there is a danger of the United States meeting its first defeat in Walker Cup competition.

On Monday, the New England Professional Golfers' Organization will hold a 36-hole amateur-pro tournament at the Wachusett Country Club. The West Boylston club not only boasts of a legion of fine golfers but points with pride to its beautiful and attractive layout.

With Miss Dorothy Hunter ineligible, the third annual Massa. Girls' Junior championship, which starts Tuesday at Albemarle will for the first time, be a free for all, with Miss Winifred Peterson, Oakley, slightly favored.

Due to the fact that Dorothy Hunter was such an outstanding golfer, girls between the ages of 14 and 18 have never displayed any great interest in this championship. Now that Albemarle girls also has outgrown the junior ranks the influx of new talent should encourage the continuance of this championship.

ENTRIES CLOSE TODAY

Entries for the state girl's junior championship close today with Mrs. F. A. Sherwood, Belmont. Only unquestionably post entries will be accepted.

The Girl's Junior championship will include an 18-hole qualifying round on Tuesday and there will be a first round of match play each day through Friday when a new champion will step to the throne.

The annual Connecticut Country Club open starts next Wednesday and is to be a two day event while the three day Bellevue Golf Club open is scheduled to get underway on Thursday.

MELROSE TEAM AT WINTHROP

At Ingleside Park in Winthrop the sole Suburban Twi League game of this afternoon has Winthrop Town Team against Melrose City Club. Both are tied for eighth place and the winner goes into a tie for seventh with the Andy Dillon Club.

CUBS AT REVERE

In tomorrow's game, also a matinee affair, Stoneham Cubs travel to Revere K of C. The two teams are tied for fifth into a second place tie with the Jamaica Plain Club.

FAIR GAIN

South Boston and Waltham gained in the Boston Twi race and Southie's win over Concord put the Southie team in second place. As Waltham won from the Carlisle the Watch City team took a third place tie with Concord.

PUZZLE: TRY TO FIND KATE SMITH

"When the M-o-o-h-o-o-n-n Comes Over the Mountain——." That's Kate's melody, but you won't find her up there because the Cubs won't allow her in their shower bath. And are they happy? Three in a row over the Dodgers would make a dumb man sing and a deaf guy listen. Above you see (left to right) Gabby Hartnett, Manager Charlie Grimm, Guy Bush, Coach O'Leary of the Chicago Cow O'Learys), Pat Maline, Rollie Hemsley and Billy Herman.

VON ELM HAS RADICAL SET OF GOLF CLUBS

New York, Aug. 27—Golfers are at last running to fashions in clubs. With the advent of the steel shaft, manufacturers have been making radical and revolutionary changes in golf club designs.

The latest design in irons has just appeared, having been fashioned by George von Elm, the "thinking-man" golfer. These new clubs present such a radical departure in construction that they merit description.

The blade is noticeably shorter and more compact. The "angle design as used by Jones is gone. Von Elm some time ago had given to him by Angel de la Torre Tinker Point professional, a niblick with a blade fashioned almost like a meat cleaver, thin at the bottom and very thick at the top.

Using it, George found it superior to all the sandwedges he had ever played. He copied this idea, extra weight at the top of the blade in his new design.

Seventy-five per cent of all iron shots strike the ball too high on the face of the blade and distance is thus lost. Von Elm tries to overcome this defect by the new weight distribution to preserve the normal distance of the club. The player can bring off the shot with a minimum of effort.

Von Elm's new clubs may not have anything to do with the fact that day after day he is reeling off scores in the 60s and low 70s over strange courses, but, after all, figures don't lie.

So What?

The Red Sox-Indians game scheduled for the day of the eclipse has been put forward. It's bad enough to be down in the cellar without having them turn the light out, too.

Plenty of people will be glad when this eclipse is over. The last time so many people went around with smoked glasses the beggars couldn't do a day's business.

And this year, times being what they are, everyone will be out to see the eclipse with smoked glasses and a tin cup.

For about half an hour New England will be black. But the rest of the country will stay in the red.

Running an eclipse is a promoters dream of Paradise. You don't have to worry about publicity, postponements, or rainchecks.

ALEXANDER OUT TO WIN CROWN OF FOXX

to the baseball history of New England?"

"I couldn't, I knew, pull the Sox from the cellar to the top this year, though I may next season. So I set about searching for something that no Red Sox player had ever accomplished.

"But just as I was about to give up the hunt, I took one more look. And, lo and behold, I found the weakness that I could remedy in the Athletics.

"Yes sir, mates, Old Dale, without any assistance, did find and discover that never had a member of the Boston Red Sox won a batting championship. Not only that, but of all the clubs in the circuit, Boston was the only one that never had been able to boast of the leading hitsmith.

"So I says to myself, says I, 'Dale can't win a pennant for the Sox but he can win the first batting championship that has ever come to the team and that's just what he's going to do.'

"And, believe you me, I'm going to do it. I'm in second place today, only three points behind Jimmy Foxx, the leader! I'll make up that difference today, maybe. Certainly not later than tomorrow.

TITLE TRACK MEET ON AT WEYMOUTH

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Weymouth folks will entertain the cream of New England track and field athletes this afternoon at Legion Memorial Park, East Weymouth, when 17 track and field championships are decided.

The list of events will start off with the 100-yard dash and continue through with the 200, the 440, 880, mile and six mile runs, three mile walk, 120 yard high hurdles and 220 yard low hurdles, the two mile steeplechase, running high and broad jumps, hop, step and jump, pole vault, putting 16 pound shot, the discus and javelin throws.

N. E. ACES ENTERED

All events will be chock full of thrills as the best of N. E. athletes have been mustered. One event which should draw the attention of the fans will be the six mile run.

North Medford Club has a team of distance plodders to compete against the Dorchester men, while other club groups and men running unattached will be seen.

Walter Crotty, Bill Malloy, Charlie Welch, John Downey and Johnny Kelley represent the North Medford Club in the half dozen mile run. Johnny McLeod, Vincent Signore, Phil Leslie and Chester Porter will wear the Dorchester Club colors.

Al Rogan of Watertown will defend his title in the running hop, step and jump. The other entries will have a job on their hands trying to take his crown away.

MORANG IN HIGH JUMP

Another interesting event will be the high jump with Al Morang, former Northeastern star, and George Plansky of the B. A. A. Lynn will send Bob Looney and Larry McGovern into the leap, along with Joe Poirier of Brockton.

Art Jannell of the St. Pius Club in Lynn will defend his New England 120-yard title against a large field. Norman Woolford, Franklin flash, representing the Karbu A. C.; Eddie Calvin, teammate; Don Feit of the Melrose "Y"; Reed Morse and Elsworth Roberts of the St. Pius Club; Francis Lane of Melrose, an Exeter sprinter, and others are after Jannelli laurels.

Much the same field will whistle for 220-yard crown. Larry Scanlon of the Dorchester Club, schoolboy champion from Boston English, is in there.

MAXIE ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 27 (INS)—Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight champion, arrived from Germany today aboard the Hamburg-American liner that he would win his forthcoming fight with Mickey Walker.

"Walker is a formidable fighter, but I'll beat him," the German heavyweight declared. "I'll win in 12 rounds."

Sarazen Adds New Laurels to Record

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 27 (INS)—Gene Sarazen, United States and British open golf champion, with Miss Peggy Wattles, New York State women's titleholder, today boosted new laurels.

The combination of champions defeated W. Hamilton Gardner, the club champion, and Miss Marian Morgan, 3 up and 2 to play, here yesterday.

WALCOTT WON FAME IN GO WITH SMITH

By JOE MOONEY

CHAPTER 3

Street cars inch along, riders hanging from the steps. From every direction the crowd is hurrying to Music Hall to see Joe Walcott fight Mysterious Billy Smith. It is the first of March, 1895.

The fight is a natural, and better, A grudge fight. Fifteen rounds, and each man for himself. It is a fight, the like of which Boston has never seen before. And has never seen since.

The ring is pitched in the middle of the stage. Three thousand five hundred of the sporting fancy, who have paid anywhere from ten dollars to 50 cents occupy every available inch of space. Every seat on the floor is taken. They're standing ten deep in the back. Three balconies groan under the weight of hundreds.

FIGHTERS READY

Little Joe lolls in his corner, Joe Hicks is massaging his back and neck muscles, talking, grinning. Tom O'Rourke is in Walcott's corner, watching Smith's handlers. Outstarring Howie Hodgkins across the 24-foot canvas square ring is Barney Aarons, the third man in the fight, is leaning on the ring ropes, accepting greetings from the ringsiders. The fighters have announce Yucatan gloves on, now. Now the seconds are out. The bell.

And from this point on Joe Walcott and Mysterious Billy Smith engage in 15 rounds of modified murder. They spar for an opening only for the first few seconds. Then Walcott tears in with windmill swings to smite Smith's body. The blows land with solid chunks. They hurt. Plenty.

DEFEND ON FOOTWORK

Both fighters stand stiffly erect, depending on lightning footwork to carry them in and out of murderous exchanges. Walcott spins half around as he pivots to throw a left hook into Smith's ribs. In close he gets the heel of Smith's glove on the side of the head. Referee Aarons is unconcerned.

The two fighters merge into rough and tumble scrimmage contests. From the fourth round on the howling fans are treated to an exhibition of every illegal tactic known to the game.

The crowd was distinctly pro-Smith and carried its support even between rounds. Instead of engaging Referee Aarons' attention so that Smith could unload a little fistic contraband on Walcott, they yell:

"Hi, Barney!"

And Barney would take his eyes off the fighters to recognize the speaker of the house. This was the signal for Smith to stick his head into Walcott's face. Now he got it in Joe's mouth, and Joe promptly bit the offending digit.

Then a piece of evidence had to clear his throat—to put it delicately—frequently in Walcott's face.

Most pieces of evidence end the battle, however, came in the seventh round. Smith had been taking more than his share of punishment. A bullet head. Each time the black shirt wind swept in close to strike, he would supplement his efforts with a short uppercut with the head.

BITES WALCOTT'S HEAD

It was more than the outraged Smith could bear. In the seventh he caught Joe in close, and bugged him. Then he sank his molars deep into the top of Walcott's head.

The referee had long since stopped keeping a tabulation of points. It wasn't that kind of a fight. It was a case of who would go down first.

And in all 15 rounds, neither fighter dropped once. For 50 minutes they stood toe to toe, slugging, gouging, butting, biting, kneeing each other to the finish.

Finally the last bell sounded. Two bloody welterweights staggered blindly to their corners. Barney Aarons raised both arms to silence a delirious fight mob that was standing on the chairs, roaring applause.

A draw.

So it stands in the record books today. But it was Joe Walcotts fight. He had more than whipped Mysterious Billy—and Billy knew it. The crowd knew it, too.

Even drawing with Smith, who a year before had challenged unsuccessfully for the world's welterweight crown then gracing the brow of Tommy Ryan, was enough to establish Walcott's arrival as a great fighter. O'Rouke was ready to throw him into the big circuit, Joe would go to New York.

(In Monday's installment, Joe is followed through the years that led him to the championship bout with Rube Fern.)

BABE'S HOME RUN RECORD IN DANGER

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—Despite the battle for major league batting honors between Jimmie Foxx of the Athletics and Chuck Klein of the Phillies and the few "outsiders" who have been able to break in on their hitting monopoly, few if any records appear endangered by their efforts so far.

They still have around 30 games to go before the season ends but the record figures are far above the marks the leader in each after yesterday's game had put the two here near.

Foxx, hitting his 47th home run yesterday, remained well ahead of Babe Ruth's mark of 46 while Paul Waner of Pittsburgh with 41 doubles is not far from the National League record of 50.

FEW CHANGES IN STANDING

There were few changes in the standing of the batting leaders in either league this week.

Frank Ogrodowski got a jump from his batting average of the previous Friday but continued to lead both circuits at .366 while Foxx, American League leader, moved up three points to .364.

RUTH HITTING .346

The American League records for runs were compiled by Foxx, New York, 346; Ruth, New York, 346; Manush, Washington, 336; Heilmann, St. Louis, 331; Rice, Washington, 321 and Simmons, St. Louis, 321.

The outstanding performances in both leagues were Foxx, Klein, 13 Runs batted in; Ruth, 10; Heilmann, 14; Waner, 10; Manush, Sewell, 9; Foxx, Klein, 8; Foxx, 10; Hurst, Lindstrom, 7; Foxx, Klein, Waner, Ott, 6; Foxx, 12; Klein, Waner, Ott, Lindstrom, Terry, 11; Klein and Stephenson, 10; Foxx, 47; Ruth, Yankees, 45; Klein, 35; stolen bases, Chapman, Yankees, 37; Klein, 23.

Performances were good this week. Johnny Allen of the Yankees turned in three victories to gain a .24 and 2 record and also the American League lead from his teammate Vernon Gomez who recorded his 21st victory against six defeats.

Sullivan Baseball Genius

By RILEY GRANNON

Make a positive baseball statement and as sure as this is the last Saturday of August, 1932, somebody will happen along carrying a contradiction almost before you are through talking.

Your boy Riley sat up at the Fens listening attentively to a conversation between Jack Slattery able scout of the Braves and "Buck" Freeman old home town kid and now an ex-Red Sox hurler for the Braves.

"This should be good," said I, B. R. to himself. "These two gents know the game backwards. They should have something interesting to say."

They did. They compared notes. Freeman said he had found no body worth while after a fine-combing of local amateur and semi-pro sandlots. Slattery said he met with the same results while spending six weeks recently in the Middle West.

CATCHERS SCARCE

Then Freeman got to making a few observations.

"I think there is too much shifting around of players being attempted these days," he said. "Most managers seem to feel that a good shortstop can play either second or third equally well. They look upon second baseman, third baseman and shortstops as infielders who can be used at any of the three positions or maybe at all nine.

"That's a big mistake. No two positions have much in common except base and third base play are entirely different. Playing shortstop is extremely unlike holding down either third or second. I have never seen the player who was equally good in two or more positions."

"Well, there haven't been many, it's sure," commented "Slats."

VERSATILE ACE FOUND

The game between the Red Sox and White Sox was started at this point and the pair ceased to pay to watch the pastime. And we've gazed what should green eyes but that we sat behind it agreed is an rare

Bill Sullivan, Jr., son of our fan, ex-White Sox outfielder and back-and-down-East fan of the Pat Hoe and in a manner that he called Hal Chase in his prime.

And the same Sullivan is also played third base just as well and next year if Manager Bonaparte knows what he's talking Bill, the kid will be in of the game's greatest catchers.

Unless appearances are deceiving young Bill is the finest natural ball player to reach the majors in a decade. It makes no difference where he plays he stands out.

KNOWS HOW TO PLAY

He knows next to nothing of the technique of playing first. This is he couldn't tell you much about how the bag should be played. Yet without knowing the whys or wherefores, he instinctively covers the sack better than those who know all the secrets.

He picks up a ball and lets it fly without even waiting to see where his object is situated. He rarely misses, and has a keen sense of direction. Only natural ball players possess that knack.

If he thinks a ball might get through him, he throws his body on it. Nothing that he can reach is going to get by him.

He thinks fast and always correctly.

He should make a great catcher. He should be a star anywhere he is put.

If Freeman never before saw a player who could hold down two positions equally well, he saw one in Billy Sullivan, who can play two more and hit to all fields and run like a scared rabbit in the bargain.

Keep the young man in mind. You'll hear a lot of nice things about him in the next few years.

SPRINGFIELD PLAYS PELICANS

Omaha, Aug. 27 (AP)—The New Orleans Pelicans are the hope of the Western Division in the "Little World Series" of the American Legion annual baseball tournament.

The Southerners gained their way to the final contest at Manchester, N. H., August 30 to September 1 by defeating Los Angeles here yesterday, 11 to 6, for the regional title. In the Eastern meet the Paposes will face Springfield, Mass.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press

Leon Chagnon, Pirates—Blanked Phillies with seven hits.

Charley Berry, White Sox—Combed Red Sox pitching for home run, two doubles and single.

Sox Notes

Billy Chamberlain, young southpaw from Milton, pitched one inning and part of another for the White Sox in the third game of the series with the Red Sox. He was the only one of four Pale Hose flingers who didn't give a hit, and he handed out but one pass. He showed plenty of class.

If Carey Selph, Chicago third-baseker, didn't ask if he looked dark, when the returns of that dizzy 20-inning game were all in, he should have. The box score discloses that he was the only player on either team except the pitchers, most of whom didn't get long enough to bat, who didn't get a safety.

The White Sox did most of the hitting, but the Red Sox did most of the walking and won. A total of 18 hits for 31 bases, including home runs by Charlie Berry and Luke Appling and six doubles and three bases on balls were collected by the Pale Hose. The natives made only 13 hits, including two doubles, but were presented with 14 passes.

A few days' rest on the bench seems to work wonders with the White Sox batting eyes. Charlie Berry, former Fenway favorite, returned to the lineup after a vacation, caused by weak hitting, and banged out a home run, two doubles and a single and drew a walk in five times up. Lou Blue, another alleged to be in a batting slump, hit a double as a pinch hitter in the second game and walked in the same role yesterday.

MRS. HILL IN TITLE DEFENSE

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 27 (AP)—Mrs. Opal Hill of Kansas City, the defending champion and an experienced campaigner, and Lucille Robinson, a youngster from Des Moines, Ia., faced off in the 36-hole final battle for the women's western golf title today.

Mrs. Hill, winner of the title in 1929 and 1931, was favored to overcome her younger, less experienced adversary, but the struggle was expected to last most of the day.

The Kansas City star yesterday reached the final by a 3 and 2 victory over Mrs. Tom Wallace of Tulsa, Okla.

Ring Notes

Eddie Mack, the fiery top-sergeant of the Argonne A. A. has an all-heavyweight card listed for next Tuesday night at Fenway Park that should draw the biggest crowd at one of his fistic shows this summer.

The fans like to see the big boys sock and slam and will go a long way to watch the giants swap caresses. Walter Cobb goes on against that crushing colored gendarman from Cambridge, Jack Sigmore, in the feature.

Al Grayson vs. Ricardo Bertorzola, John Dixon vs. Eddie Callahan, Danny Regan vs. Tiger Henderson and Chet Lanier vs. Henry Surette are other classy bouts. There will be a couple of tons of fighting men in the Mack show and there should be some frequent canvas kissing once they start pegging away.

Another amateur boxing show will be put on by the Lynn Gas A. A. next Thursday night. There will be milling in four classes, 126 147 for novices, 135 and 175 open.

Just to show how tough he really is Steve Pesaus has agreed to meet Sahib Setheg in the main bout of Charlie Gordon's wrestling show at Fenway Park next Wednesday night. Pesaus weighs but 175 pounds, while the Terrible Turk tips the scales at 329 pounds.

CHURCH LEAGUE SERIES OPENS

Mattapan Baptist Church baseball team plays the Eliot Street Congregational Church team today at 3:15 in the first of a three-game series for the championship of the Greater Boston Church League, on Milton Town Field.

Mattapan, winner of both the 1930 and 1931 championships, will present its strongest lineup for the game with Ken Kinghorn on the mound and Al Guiesuan catching. Eliot Street will use McCaig pitching and Smith catching.

The second game of the series is expected to be played at Fenway Park, Saturday, September 3, at 3:15.

SCIENTISTS ON SCENE READY FOR ECLIPSE

Fryeburg Me Aug 27 (INS)—This part of the New England and Canada heaven the Southern Maine and up into Canada heaven the Scientists were in the air today with an array of strangest looking with strange and delicate instruments.

They are assembled from the farthest in the expectation of a rare event on hand for the eclipse of the sun tomorrow morning. The total eclipse will begin at 8:26.9 p.m. near Wedgewood and last for 130 seconds.

Planned about the same [illegible] town with a few in the center of the narrow space of the instruments and the measurements are now complete. Great

The [illegible] Observatory at Cambridge, Mass., under charge of Dr. Harlow Shapley, Dearborn Observatory of Northwestern University, under charge of Prof. O.

HARVARD PARTY AT GRAY

At Gray, Me., a few miles away, is the Harvard College Observatory's expedition under charge of Dr. W. J. Luther. From one of the expeditions are located on sites at Douglas Hill, Limington and Biddeford, Me.

At Canaan, N. H., a group of Conway, Barnard, Mount Washington, Whitefield, Bethlehem and a dozen other points in New Hampshire and at Derby, Vt., A. A. Miller noted expert gazer of Solar observatory. Southwestern College has set up its equipment and will be used in observations there.

In Canada the Royal Observatory of Greenwich, England, and the Dominion observatory of Canada have set up equipment, including at Parent, P. Q., where the British units are under charge.

TO STUDY VARIOUS EFFECTS

Scattered about in the astronomical expeditions also are groups of physicists and electrical experts, geologists and chemists. The astronomers plan to study the effects of the sun on atmosphere and what may be found do not know what. The physicists expect to study the effects of the eclipse on radio transmission.

Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson and Dr. Irving Langmuir of the General Electric Co. [illegible] will make records of the changes in radio reception during the eclipse.

Big Magnetic Storm in Path of Eclipse

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

The prediction is an example of a new kind of [illegible] which [illegible] possible the [illegible] advance notice of a magnetic storm has been important in a large number of cases.

STORMS COME FROM SUN

Magnetic storms are electrical disturbances coming from the sun. Scientists think they are caused both by the invisible ultraviolet rays and by corpuscular bombardments, electrical particles shot out from the sun.

The forecast for the eclipse was made by A. M. Skellett of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York. It is important information for the scientists who will use the long twilight of the eclipse and the moment's night to learn more about the reasons for radio fading and differences between day and night transmission.

This magnetic storm, Mr. Skellett is likely to strike a day or two before the eclipse.

STORM AFFECTS RADIO

Its source is a sun spot. The sun revolves on its axis just like the earth but takes 27 days for one turn around, so the spot shows up facing the earth every 27 days. It is only when it is facing the earth that the magnetic radiations are felt.

Based on previous experiences with this spot, Mr. Skellett predicts that radio transmission is likely to be disturbed at least moderately and possibly severely.

Even if the storm interferes with planned radio experiments, it will not ruin the scientific work on the effects of these storms is one of radio's [illegible] scientists seek more information.

4 Killed, 20 Hurt as Work Truck Topples

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27 (AP)—Four men were killed and [illegible] injured today as the truck in which they were being taken to work toppled over an embankment near Frankfort Springs, Pa.

The truck pulled to one side of the road to allow another car to pass. The road was narrow and the heavy truck slipped down an embankment of soft earth and overturned.

Air Derby Manager Hurt in Plane Crash

Summit, N. J., Aug. 27 (AP)—Maj. Lake, manager of two air derbies from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., to Cleveland, and his assistant, W. D. Guthrie, treasurer of Roosevelt Field, crashed today in fog on a mountain in Watchung Reservation. Both were injured.

UTILITIES LEAD NEW ADVANCE IN STOCKS

New York, Aug. 27—Spurred by an advance of more than $2.50 a bale in cotton, active shares moved up 1 to 4 points in a boiling market on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Trading moved at better than 1,000,000 shares an hour pace, the total for the session amounting to approximately 2,200,000 shares. Stocks closing with net gains numbered 469, while those with net declines were 133. Stocks remaining unchanged were 139.

SOME MAJOR GAINS

Advances of 2 to more than 3 points at the finish remained in such issues as Consolidated Gas, American Power & Light, American & Foreign Power and North American. Case, however, lost half of a 3-point rise, and International Harvester finished up only a fraction, after rising 2.

U. S. Steel, after rising more than a point to a new high for the recovery, closed up about ½ point.

The commodities were more impressive than the stocks and those with utilities showing pronounced strength in the last hour.

But one group began to slip as buying shifted into utilities, and while many issues in that group closed about 1 to 3 points higher, bet gains elsewhere were somewhat meager.

The upsurge of $2.50 a bale for cotton was accompanied by a gain of about 2 cents in wheat, which had been a laggard yesterday, and the movement in these staples continued to stir bullish enthusiasm. The recent slump in bonds was checked, and that market scored some improvement.

COPPERS FIRM GROUP

Coppers were again a firm group, with American Smelting, Kennecott, Anaconda, all closing about a point higher. Similar net gains appeared in American Can, Thiokol, Allied Chemical and Western Union.

American Telephone was not a particular strong spot at any time, and it reacted to close with a loss of a point. Auburn lost 2 points. Stalls failed to participate appreciably.

The freight car loadings figures as reported for the week ended Aug. 20, were a little disappointing. A gain of only 6211 cars was small for that period of the year, and followed an advance of more than 16,000, in the previous week. Carloadings usually work sharply higher during August.

Miscellaneous freight loaded during the week ended August 20 totaled 181,807 cars, a decrease of 58,781 under the corresponding week in 1931; less than carload freight 169,946, decrease 44,964; grain and grain products 38,183, decrease 6597; coal 84,790, decrease 22,962; forest products 15,678, decrease 11,583; ore 7228, decrease 28,499; coke 2615, decrease 1745, and livestock 13,487, decrease 5755.

Weekly reviews of the steel industry provided some encouragement. While important gains in production are not expected until after Labor Day, Carnegie Steel, one of the leading U. S. Steel subsidiaries, is planning to resume operations in one of its largest Ohio plants next week.

Stocks Close Higher on Boston Exchange

Stocks closed higher in today's short session of trading on the Boston Stock Exchange with changes ranging from fractions to 4 or more points. Several new highs for the year were recorded.

Quincy Stores sold at a new 1932 high on a gain of over a point. Pacific Mills sold up over 2 points to a new high for the year at its closing price of 13. United Gas Co. and Pond Creek Pocahontas were also at new highs.

Edison Electric was strong and gold 2 points above its previous closing price at 172. New England Telephone soared 4 points and ended the week at 108. Point or better gains were shown for such issues as Hygrade Sylvania, Bigelow Hartford, Mohawk and Stone & Webster.

Cotton Higher in New York Market

New Orleans, Aug. 27 (AP)—Nine cent cotton for immediate delivery materialized today as futures continued an irrepressible advance in heavy trading and the October contract moved up to 9.18, or approximately $20.25 a bale above the year's lows reached June 10.

The net advance for the day in the general market's two-hour session was $2.75 a bale, making the total advance for the week a little more than $8 a bale.

Carloadings for Week Increased

Revenue freight loadings in the week ended August 20 totaled 518,646 cars, or 421,916 below the like 1931 week and 421,916 below the like 1930 week, according to the American Railway Association.

Grains End Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP)—Wheat closed 1¾ to 1⅞c. higher today in an active short session. Corn was ⅝ to 1⅛c. up, oats ¼ to ⅝c. advanced and rye 1¼ to 1½c. higher.

Bar Silver Is Higher

JUST LIKE A WOMAN

-:- Feminine Interests in the Day's News -:-

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

Everyone Who Loves Romance Hopes for Happy Landings for the Mollisons

IF THERE'S ONE THING which every woman, with a shred of romance in her, hopes just now it's that the blue-eyed, sandy-haired Scot, Capt. James Allan Mollison, flies swiftly and safely on his return trip across the Atlantic. To speed the parting guest always seems a bit ungracious—yet, much as we all admire Capt. Mollison, some of us feel that he cannot leave too soon to rejoin Amy Johnson, the bride of three weeks, who so gallantly let him go and so humanely worried over his going.

When his Puss Moth plane, The Heart's Content, once more "sits down" at Croydon Aerodrome that will be the happiest of all the "happy landings" to which aviators have drunk many a toast. And the hearts, not only of Capt. Mollison and Amy but of all the world's lovers will Be CONTENT!

KNEW THE HAZARDS

For they have been as much concerned with the romance behind the only successful east-to-west solo Atlantic flight as with the flight itself. Amy Johnson, attractive young winner of the woman's England to-Australia flight record, is to Americans a sort of British Amelia Earhart, to be admired for the same spectacular qualities.

Yet, for one, we couldn't help feeling that the best of sports women should have been allowed to enjoy her honeymoon in peace!

She was too honest to hide her anguished anxiety from the moment when her Jim soared off into the Atlantic fog until he was reported across. She gave out none of those traditional—and unbelievable—statements in which fliers' wives specialize—the stuff about "not having a moment's doubt that he will do it."

Famous flier herself, Amy Johnson knew too much about aviation's hazards to make such a pathetically prophetic parade of confidence. She probably knew too much for her own peace of mind.

WEPT UNASHAMEDLY

When he kissed Mollison goodbie, in Ireland, she wept unashamedly. For two nights—the night of his flight and the night before he took off—she never closed her eyes. These were, in her own phrase, "the worst hours of my life."

The flash bulletin of her husband's success arrived just in time to stop her from going up in her own plane, with the expressed intention of doing "upside down and other crazy flying to keep my mind off things." White-faced and nervous, alternately crying and laughing, she could hardly believe the good news.

It was all so human, so much the age-old attitude of every woman who loves a lover who loves danger! Yet Captain Mollison's story acquitted him of undue lack of consideration. He said, on his arrival:

"This flight wouldn't have taken place at all, because of my marriage, only all arrangements had been made six months earlier. To back out at the last minute might have been misinterpreted. Once you say a thing, you now, you have to go through with it."

"I could not love thee, dear, so much, Loved I not honor more."

Not only love but true comradeship exists between Amy Johnson and her mate. Their interests lie in the same channels and they have, in Capt. Mollison's own words, "a great time."

PATTERN 9314

IF YOUR little girl is just starting school, we assure you that little cotton frocks are "the only thing." They're so easy to keep fresh and clean and are so cunning and gay to wear. The frock sketched has the yoke, sleeves, and front panel cut in one. Top-stitching and buttons contrasting collar and cuffs make a delightful finish.

Pattern 9314 may be ordered only in sizes 2 to 10. Size 6 requires 2½ yards 36 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

To get a pattern of this model, send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred). Transfer Pattern 10c additional. Please write very plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern ordered.

Veal Dinner for Hubby's Mother

By MARTHA LEE

"MY MOTHER-IN-LAW is coming to spend Sunday with us for the first time. What can you suggest for dinner that won't appear extravagant? She thinks I can only cook steaks and chops!"—the distress signal comes by special delivery from a Brookline bride.

For this important dinner, I suggest veal for the main dish—economical, delicious veal made superfine by an interesting recipe. To serve with it, old-fashioned Scalloped Potatoes and, so that mother-in-law will be sure Jimmy is getting his full quota of those vital vitamines, Spinach—with Green Corn as second choice; and for a salad, finely shredded cabbage, celery, pickles and pimientos, carefully seasoned and encased in delicious lemon gelatine. For dessert, Plum Rolls with Plum Sauce, and then a perfect cup of coffee, unless her taste prefers tea.

PREPARE MEAT TODAY

You'll notice we're not starting off with Soup or Fruit Cocktail, lest mother-in-law think Jimmy's wife is "putting on airs."

The meat may be prepared today, so telephone the market man to send about 1½ pounds of veal cutlets, one inch thick. Dredge this with a mixture of 4 tbsps. of flour, ¼ tsp. paprika, 1 tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. pepper, making sure the meat is thoroughly covered. Then try out some of the veal fat, by cutting it from the meat and heating it slowly. Put 4 tbsps. of this fat in a heavy frying pan. Add 1½ cups of onions, thinly sliced, and fry until the onions are a delicate cream color and tender.

Take them out of the pan and put in the cutlets. Fry them carefully to a nice brown on both sides. Place the onions on the cutlets and pour on ¾ cup of sour cream. Put a tight cover on the frying pan and simmer gently for one hour, or until the meat is tender, lifting it occasionally to let the cream flow under it and prevent it sticking.

FOR THE POTATOES

For the old-fashioned scalloped potatoes you will need about four very large potatoes, pared and cut in eight inch slices. Also one medium-sized onion, sliced thin and about ½ tsp. salt, a dash of pepper and 1½ tbsps. flour. Place the potatoes and onions in a deep buttered baking dish, sprinkling each layer with the seasoning and flour and dotting with butter. And just enough milk to cover (about 1¼ cups), and bake in a moderate oven, 350° F., for two hours, or until the potatoes are tender, putting a cover over them for the last half hour.

For the salad, dissolve 1 pkg. lemon-flavored gelatine in 1 cup of boiling water. Stir thoroughly, add 1 cup of cold water or 1 cup of fruit juice and 1 tbsp. vinegar and ½ tsp. salt. When partly congealed, then add two or three pimientos, finely chopped, ½ cup of finely shredded cabbage, ½ cup celery and 1 cup of chopped sweet or sour pickles. Mold in individual molds or in a ring mold and serve with mayonnaise diluted with chili sauce or catsup.

MAKING THE ROLLS

For the plum rolls, sift 1½ cups of flour with 2 tsps. baking powder and ½ tsp. salt. Cut in 2 tbsps. butter. Add about ½ cup of milk gradually until you have a soft dough. Roll ¼ inch thick on floured board and cover with 2 cups canned plums, cut in bits. Roll like a jelly roll and cut in 1½ inch slices. Place cut side up in a muffin sauce made by mixing together 1 cup of sugar, 1 tbsp. flour, 1 cup of plum syrup and 1 cup of water. Cook until thick, often, and serve hot with the sauce poured around and a tablespoon of whipped cream on each slice.

Fashion Notes

BY THE WAVES we see all sorts of intriguing outfits this year. One girl wears white terry cloth pyjamas, with a bodice of blue and white striped cotton jersey. Her beret is of the white terry cloth with a blue button on top.

ALREADY we have news and views of the new hats for Autumn. A popular model will be a hat of black velvet, a gob-like turban with black velvet buttons outlining the sections of the crown. It has a turned-back puff brim.

Do You Know?

The Texas capitol at Austin covers three acres and has about 30 acres of floor space in all.

Fewer Seams in Newest Paris Gowns

By PARIS BUREAU

Paris, Aug. 27—Make your frock with as few seams as possible but let those few seams serve as decorations; this is one of the instructions that successful Paris dressmakers would give to all designers of women's clothes.

The old days of plentiful cutting and snipping are gone, as far as the Paris dressmaking world is concerned, and the really lovely dresses that come out of the French fashion circles are those which have been literally draped on the human figure and made into practical frocks with the minimum of cutting and sewing.

The few necessary seams in every frock are capitalized. Far from being disguised, they are very much in evidence. Extra stitchings let you know exactly where they are, piping in some times used to accent them further. The scarf sash, the lines and angles which decorate a dress rather than mar it.

Lyolene made good use of the few seams on her red woolen dress in today's sketch. There is one straight line down the center-front and another at the center back; the sleeves are in one with the sides. The diagonal opening is brought into relief by means of visible stitching.

GLORIFYING THE SEAM

Wool Combined With Silk

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Red wool combined with red and white checked silk makes the dress sketched at left, from Lyolene. Fauvety designed the other frock, a yellow bourrette dress which shows clever use of visible stitching. It has a royal blue detachable silk scarf.

The Marry-Go-Round

If Love Were Deleted

By HELEN ROWLAND

"LOVE" REMARKS an intelligent modern girl, "is the bunk! Men don't fall in love any more—and girls don't marry for it. The slender passion is as out of style as a pillow muff and as dead as Lash May's sonnets. Among sophisticated people it is positively declasse!"

* * *

When love dies out, I. M. G., all the beauty will go out of business the next day. All the perfumers and toilet goods manufacturers, all the owners of silk mills and makers of artificial flowers, all the jewelers and corset makers and plastic surgeons will commit hara-kari, and all the crooners will cut their own throats!

Helen Rowland

When love goes out of fashion, publishers of best sellers will be jumping off roofs, moving pictures stars will be leaping from windows, magazine editors will be put in padded cells and fortune tellers will have to go to work!

* * *

Half the big industries in the world today are founded on LOVE—and on woman's desire to have love and to hold it.

* * *

It is true that love is suffering from plenty of competitions. Love has always had a lot of competition in a man's life. There have always been his work, his ambitions, his self-interest and his amusements for love to combat. But love always won!

* * *

And now love has to face competition in a woman's life. Not that there is any normal woman who doesn't want and intend to HAVE life. But the average girl wants so many other things besides that love sometimes gets lost—or temporarily mislaid—in the shuffle.

* * *

She wants adventure and self-expression and experience. She wants to try her wings and fly high before settling down in a dove cote. She wants a fling at a career or at a profession. She wants to make money, to travel, to write, to study interior decorating or to try her luck in Hollywood. She wants to fly a plane or drive a car or run a business. Sometimes, marriages—and love ats the things she THINKS she wants least in the world!

* * *

Oh, yes! Love has to put up a pretty stiff fight to win out against so many rivals. But in the end love usually gets his way with her. She always wakes up, sooner or later, to discover that success or fame or excitement or adventure doesn't amount to much unless there is someone on the other side of the table or the fireplace to enjoy it with you, or share it with you. Without love, they are just dead sea fruit!

* * *

Or she discovers that there are just as many thrills in a kitchenette or in a bungalow as there are in an airplane. Or that she can get more kick out of putting up cretonne curtains than out of pulling down a swimming record.

* * *

That's what happens to her. And, if it happens too late, she finds herself wondering why life is so flavorless. Because with- out LOVE nothing has much tang or kick or significance—not even success!

* * *

* * *

So the beauty parlors and silk mills and movie theaters will keep right on running. Because love will never be obsolete!

The Beauty Box

GIVE YOUR hair the air. It needs ventilation, especially now that the finger wave keeps it smacked down flat to the scalp. The best time for airing and scalp friction is the night before shampoo when the wave is weak, doesn't care what happens to it. Begin with a brushing, strand by strand, holding the hair straight up away from the head. Rub the scalp briskly, running the fingers through the hair as if they were the teeth of a comb. A bit of hot oil or tonic helps along the good work.

American's Daily True Story

No Escape

SOLITUDE. ISOLATION. Escape from the haunts of men—escape from a girl—that is what Don Gordon wanted. As he pitched his canvas shelter at the edge of Lake Lonely, he believed he had found it. Except for the birds and an occasional scurrying small animal, a leaping fish out in the ripples of the lake, he seemed to be in a one-man Eden of his own.

Across the water the greens of trees and foliage blended in a symphony of color that would have warmed the heart of a Corot. But, there was only a sigh, after all, in the heart of Don Gordon.

He told himself that civilization was "bunk," that woman was fickle, that life was a "joke." He made himself some supper, and under a mosquito netting, slept.

* * *

Morning. Mists rising across the lake. Shafts of sun gilding its clear surface. Don woke. He was hungry. He started a fire, began to fry bacon. And then, for the first time he gazed across the lake at a few hundred yards. On the opposite shore he saw a speck of white. Somebody had already erected a tent before he was up.

Don went back to frying his bacon with a fresh, if somewhat moody introspection. He was aroused from his reverie by the sound of splashing water. He looked. A girl in a crimson bathing suit was wading out of the shallows of the shore. Don frowned again.

LOAN OF MATCHES

He tried to pay no attention to the visitor. The girl, petite, her golden hair and wavely bidden by a yellow bathing cap, came confidently toward him.

"I beg your pardon," said she, with a smile that would have disarmed an ogre, "but have you any matches?"

"Plenty," he replied.

"You see," she said, "we are not used to camping. We came away with a lot of duffle—but not a single match. And father always needs a day off hunting his bugs and things, and I can't get breakfast. Of course, if I were a Girl Scout I might start a fire by rubbing sticks together, but I don't know how."

Don fished into a canvas bag and took out a box of matches. He handed them to her.

"Won't you have a bit of bacon and some bread?" Don asked.

They sat by the fire and ate in peace and comfort.

DON IS HONORED

"I owe you an explanation," she said finally. "You see, father is a scientist. He'd rather find out what bugs do—discover a new species—than eat! We came up here to escape from the racket of the city, the usual vacation crowds. I've never been camping before, so I never thought of matches."

"Perfectly all right. You don't have to explain. I'm honored," said Don. And for the first time he grinned—with a smile that almost matched hers.

"And now, thanking you again for the bacon, for the matches, for your hospitality, and all that, I'll be getting back to the camp across the lake," she said.

She rose, stretching her arms luxuriously and putting the yellow bathing cap on her bobbed golden head.

"Perhaps I should tell you, the girl said, that my name is Elaine Strong. We're from New York."

"We're than delighted to meet you, Miss Strong," said Don.

"And if I can be of any possible service while you and your father are camped here, it will be a pleasure."

"You are more than kind," said Elaine. She hesitated a moment. "But—But I don't know your name."

FORGETS ISOLATION

"Don Gordon," he said, "once more at your service."

"What a dumbbell I am," Don muttered to himself. He jumped to his feet and hurried after her.

"I hope you will forgive me for being so dense," he said as he came up to her. 'I didn't realize. Of course, it's no use borrowing matches and trying to swim across the lake with them."

"Of course not; I just realized that," said Elaine, again looking at the box. "I didn't think of it."

"But there's an easy way out. Don went on briskly. "Fortunately, I have a canoe. I'll paddle you across.

"That will be just lovely," declared Elaine. "I'll get another breakfast and you can stay and help eat it—and that will pay my social, if somewhat unconventional, call, won't it?"

"It will and more. I shall be delighted," said Don.

Two minutes later he was paddling the girl across the lake while she chattered gaily as they went. Don had forgotten that the world was blue, that women were fickle, that he was—isolation.

VALENTINE

An Exciting Story of Modern Love

(COPYRIGHT 1932)

—By HAZEL LIVINGSTON—

The Story So Far

Valentine Macfarlane is the shy, dreamy daughter of Millie Macfarlane, a widow, whose gay, romantic nature is not spoiled by poverty. Millie has numerous men acquaintances, but agrees to wed Jim Atkinson, a sea captain. She goes to the Orient, and little Val is taken to her Aunt Julia's. Millie stays in the Orient and meets new romance. Val chafes at Aunt Julia's restraint. She goes to see Joe Carey with whom she is failing in love.

Now Go On With the Story

THERE WAS A LIGHT in Carey's kitchen. That meant that the family—part of it, at least—was up.

The Careys practically lived in the kitchen. You always went around the back way, because Mrs. Carey was very nervous about burglars and kept the front door double-locked, and the back door was always open, so that you walked right into the kitchen and then "hoo-hooed" to see if anyone was home. Besides, there were so many Careys and so little house that every room was a sleeping room but the kitchen.

Val hesitated, eyeing the light. Her first courage was beginning to leave her. She felt a little footlash. It was after 9 o'clock.

"JOE'S HOME"

"Why don't you look where you're going?" the masculine voice inquired facetiously. "You might walk where you're not wanted sometime!"

"Ted-dy!"

"I mean she might, that is, it's possible. Why, It's Valentine Macfarlane, in person. Hello, Val! What you doing here? Quit pinching me, Betty!"

"Ted-dy!"

Betty giggled again. "Joe's home."

"Oh, is he? I thought I'd see—"

"Don't let us keep you," Teddy advised. "We love your company, but if you got anything else to do—"

"She's in the kitchen," Betty cut in a little more kindly. Val didn't understand boys. Let Teddy bosh her too much. A girl could afford to be nice to her, sometimes. Poor old Val!

BLUSH PLEASES

Joe was standing at his old drawing board when she entered the kitchen window a pencil in his hand. He had on an old gray sweater, with the elbows out, and a battered green eyeshade pushed back from his face. He didn't even look up when Val pushed open the screen door.

For a moment she stood looking at him, a warmth of affection in her shy eyes, a familiar sinking sensation in the pit of her stomach.

"Joe! Joe Carey, aren't you even going to look at me?"

His pencil hand, pinkish color rising, under the tan and freckles, were gratifying. Val drank it in, her smile spreading, lighting her whole face.

"Thought you were one of the kids!" He dropped the pencil, flung back the eyeshade. "Gosh, it's good to see you again. I thought you were never coming back from a pay-station on the way home, but didn't get an answer."

Joe chuckled. "Still at it, is she? Come here, Val, come closer, I want to look at you. I think you CAN'T get any prettier, but each time I see you, you are. You're a picture, standing there with the light slanting on your face, and your hair all smoky-black in the shadows."

JUST LIKE JOE

"Oh, Joe! For heaven's sake!" Val could have cried. If that wasn't like Joe! Here was, she thought, glad happy to see him, and he looking at her, measuring her nose with his pencil, as if she were a wooden image he was going to make a drawing of.

"You're the funny kid. I thought girls liked to be admired. Well, whether you like it or not I've got to admire you, Val. You're—you're beautiful."

"Joe Carey, I believe you'd as soon look at my PICTURE as at ME. Sometimes you make me so MAD! Don't laugh, Joe, I'm not trying to be funny. Joe, I came over to ask you . . . to ask you if—Joe, you aren't too old, lots of the girls are bringing older fellows! Joe, if you just would—"

"Would what, Beautiful?"

"Go to the dance?"

He went back to the drawing board. Picked up a pencil. Laid it down again.

"What dance?"

"Joe The SENIOR dance! My class dance. Lots of the girls are bringing older fellows. Why, some of the boys in the class are almost as old as you. Oscar Pralow's 21—truly he is."

"No. You don't tell me! Health all good? Walks without a cane?"

"Joe—I'm SERIOUS. It—it means something to me." Her mouth trembled.

"Why, sure I'll go, if you want me to. Look out for my hobnails, that's all."

She swallowed.

"If you only dance much, I won't mind. We can sit out the dances. Lots of girls sit out dances. But you'd have to wear a dark suit, because the others—all the others—" She swallowed again.

"How would a Tuxedo go?"

"A Tuxedo!"

KISS INTERRUPTED

She fixed large, startled eyes upon him. Joe, with a Tux. Joe going with her to the Senior Prom, with a . . . She couldn't quite visualize it. Besides, would the other boys? Marjorie had distinctly said "a dark suit," she said. Don't you Joe wear a light suit, make him wear a dark suit, hon."

Joe was grinning.

Joe's kiss—the first in almost 10 years, for he hadn't kissed her since she was 8—fell on her ear.

Joe was laughing, and she was laughing, too, but she was angry at herself. Why had she ducked? She didn't really want to duck.

"I've just got to come to you!" he finished, breathlessly.

"But it wasn't any good! It landed on my ear, and if you have to kiss me, you might at least—"

"Joe! Val song!"

It took a moment for that familiar, throaty contralto voice to register on Val's excited senses. Like a slow motion picture she moved her neck until she could see Joe's mother.

Mrs Carey stood at the open door of her bedroom, tragic in a red kimona and metal hair-curlers.

One fat hand clutching the billowing flesh over her heart, the other was pointed in scorn.

"Mama!" (from the bedroom) "Mama!"

"And YOU! You—I can't say it. Joe, I won't have such conduct in my house. And as for you—YOU, Miss! You leave my house, and don't you ever dare set foot—"

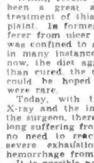
Val put her hands to her ears. She looked at the red-faced trembling woman who stood, panting, saying those things. Saw her fat livid face, greasy with cold cream and hysterically fat hair pins. Saw the sloppy pink night-dress and the inadequate red cotton kimona.

Read about Val's reaction to Mrs Carey's outburst in Monday's installment of this absorbing story.

Maybe Your Dyspepsia Is an Ulcer

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ULCER OF the stomach is a common ailment. It used to be confused with other stomach disorders and its true nature was overlooked. It has the familiar symptoms of dyspepsia, sour stomach or hyperacidity, and formerly received no more serious attention than they got. The old-fashioned remedy, baking soda, which gave temporary relief, was the usual treatment suggested.



Dr. Copeland

With the invention of the X-ray, the diagnosis of peptic ulcer was greatly simplified and could be recorded in readily recognized.

Within recent years there has been a great advance in the treatment of this annoying complaint. In former years the sufferer from ulcer of the stomach was confined to a rigid diet, but in many instances, as we see it now, the ulcer aggravated rather than cured, the disorder. Relief could be hoped for, but cures were rare.

Today, with the aid of the X-ray and the improved skill of the surgeon, there is no need for long suffering from this disorder; no need to reach the stage of severe exhaustion because of hemorrhage from the stomach.

It is possible now to get rid of ulcer of the stomach by an operation to remove the inflamed portion and heal the sore. The results obtained from this operation are remarkably satisfactory. But every case is not a case for operation, for many patients respond successfully to medical treatment. After an X-ray examination to get an analysis of the contents of the stomach the physician can decide what is the best treatment.

Answers to Health Queries

"A Constant Reader." Q.—What causes vertigo?

A.—This may be due to a circulatory disturbance, to an eye or ear condition, or to some intestinal disturbance.

Mr. L. A. B. Q.—What do you advise for moles?

A.—Moles may be made less noticeable by the use of the electric needle handled by an expert. There are chemical preparations which may be used, but must be administered by a skin specialist.

FAY JUST A DABSTER

Fay Templeton calls herself a DABSTER. Webster tells us that the word means "one who is skilled." The former stage star writes today on some opinions experience has given her. Among the things Miss Templeton has dabbed at is playing the guitar. Another, and more interesting is a study of humanity, from which she drawn today's observations.

Perhaps I sang well- to please others- But for my own entertainment I played the guitar

DON'T POSE, FAY WARNS

By FAY TEMPLETON

(This is the last of a series written by the musical comedy favorite of the past, who is now a resident of Boston.)

It naturally follows that persons who come into daily contact with the public are pretty well posted on the blessings and evils of mankind.

For that reason I suppose I am qualified to write as somewhat of an expert.

But I won't. Experts are often proved wrong and besides the word has a sneaky sound.

I'd hardly measure up to that class anyway because I've never been expert at anything. But I do a lot of things well—at least so I've been told.

JUST A DABSTER

I sing rather well as some of you may remember.

For many years I have enjoyed deep satisfaction in making people laugh and forget their trials and woes. I even play a guitar-so-so —And there are other little accomplishments.

And as I've dabbed at so many things you may be able to draw something of value from what I have gathered in the greatest of all studies—"Humanity."

I have found that the most charming of all women are those who are entirely without affectation, who conduct themselves naturally. Even to the slightest movement of their hands.

EASILY DETECTED

They are blessed with enough common sense to realize that affectation is the most easily detected weakness of man or women.

Very often it happens that the woman who has never heard of Emily Post, by sheer naturalness so charms those about her, that the others find themselves trying to cultivate her ways.

Men also may turn this thought to advantage but of course there is less affectation among men.

The man who has accomplished great things or the young man on the road to success, large or small, is usually too honest with himself to pose.

Probably that is why such men are admired by both sexes. They inspire admiration by doing things well. Personality is hod-carrier, if he does his job well, appeals to me.

And it's a good thing for wives to remember that hard working husbands get a lot of satisfaction out of a little praise now and then. They may not admit it but they do. It's the small boy in them that has never grown up.

Chairman Henry C. Isn't It Too Bad!

Shed a Tear for Auto Insurance Writers

The new rates for automobile insurance will soon be announced, and we seem to have some advance assurance from Commissioner Brown that there will not be a general raise this time.

Too bad they wouldn't be raised, when the prices of food, clothing and all the basic necessities of life have been at the lowest point in twenty years and the cost of living generally has been decreased by thirty per cent!

Too bad they wouldn't be raised, when we have had nothing but a steady increase of rates from the day this system of compulsory insurance was adopted by the State!

Too bad they wouldn't be raised, when Boston, Somerville, New Bedford and several other of the sizable communities of Massachusetts have been complimented by the National Safety Council and the United States Department of Commerce for leading all the cities of the country of their respective sizes in the low mortality rate of fatal accidents!

Too bad they wouldn't be raised, when the people of Massachusetts have been congratulated by these official institutions for having developed the finest degree of safety-mindedness in this country!

Too bad they wouldn't be raised, when the courts, the police, the district attorneys and the bar associations have conducted a successful war upon the "accident rings" of conniving lawyers, doctors and insurance adjusters who were milking the insurance companies for accidents that never happened!

IF THERE IS TO BE ANY CHANGE IN THE RATES, IT OUGHT TO BE A CHANGE DOWNWARD!

Our people have seen their rates increase from $16,000,000 to $23,000,000 a year. They cannot understand why this one element of necessity should go skyrocketing upward while all the other costs of living have gone down to bedrock under the pressure of economic conditions.

Cities like Chelsea, where the owner of a car must pay about $100 a year in insurance before he can turn a wheel, have made remarkable strides toward highway safety. They should be compensated by lowered rates.

No Charge for the Show

Astronomers, who will lug heavy apparatus with which to greet the eclipse next Wednesday, are expected to spend no less than a million dollars in preparation for the coming show. Railroads calculate that excursionists coming to New England to get a good look at it will spend another million.

A factory in New York announces that it has turned out a hundred thousand pairs of dark eyeglasses. They might have produced more if medical associations hadn't recommended strips of old film. Though the one is just as good as the other, Captain Hellweg, of the Naval Observatory, says the tinted kind you can get from the pedlar is quite satisfactory.

The prelude to the show will be shadow bands sweeping over the earth, like seas rolling in on a beach. Then, in Milton's phrase:

"Disastrous twilight shed on half the nations, and with fear of change perplexes monarchs."

This is somewhat ample notice of the event. But there are always thousands of people who become greatly annoyed at having forgotten about the eclipse until all was over. It was Stevenson who said that if sunset were announced with a roll of drums, and a charge were made for looking at it, everybody would appreciate it all the more.

Hungry Politicians

There are some 2000 men and women in this State, mostly men, who are anxious to be elected to public office in the impending elections.

A great many of them are out to serve themselves and not the citizens. They want either a job or public honor.

At least a few of them should not have stooped to the cheap and petty trick of forged nomination papers.

Watch such candidates. If they can't be trusted in the little things of politics, they would need a sheriff's guard to stand over them when it comes to handling the State appropriations of $60,000,000.

Greater Than a General

The American Chemical Society Award to "the most promising young chemist in North America under thirty years of age" is won by Dr. Oscar K. Rice. He is an instructor in advanced inorganic chemistry at Harvard.

This young man, he is 29, is tall, somewhat frail and his thick-lensed spectacles indicate the long hours of strain in the laboratory.

He was not a football hero. Nor can he be imagined at the head of an inspired Army corps in battle. But if he completes the task in life to which he has set himself—to find the complete reactions of the molecule, that indivisible atom of which all life is made—he will have done more for the world than all the generals rolled into one.

New York Day by Day

Deserted Street Fears

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Nobody in his right mind would walk along a dark, deserted street such as this after midnight alone. And smack on the edge of a gas house district, too. The last seen of Dorothy Arnold she was walking along just such a street as I walk now. Ps-s-s-st!

Now you see me, now you don't. Nothing on this side, nothing on that. That's jittery talk. I'm just fine. Practically in no pain. Maybe. I could act nonchalant just by skipping along. Hippety-hop to the barber shop. And probably have someone flatten me for a sissie.

I'll swagger. Just back from around the Horn on a windjammer. Wish I had more hair on my chest. I have a feeling someone is going to step out of a doorway and snarl: "Hey, Jack, gotta match?" I'll just shake my head and begi jabbering like a Frenchman.

Voulez-vous—that's no good. Pardonnez moi, m'sieu, voulez vous—now I'm stuck. Attendez, baby, allumet silvous plait. Maybe I'd better switch to German. Mein herr, hahen ey ein—The best thing I can do is to keep my trap closed.

Annh, annh, eek, eek! I'm not up much on crazy noises. There's someone on the next corner. He's looking my way, too. What a night for a murder. My throat is too dry to yell. The best way is to walk right up to him. The first punch always wins the battle. I'll talk tough.

Something like this: "Listen, mug, what's the tall idea—?" I'd feel better without these spats. Why didn't I stay home, anyway, tonight? I'd give $10 to be coiled up in the big leather chair, reading, right now—$10 and the set of Japanese dishes I won at Coney Island.

He's stopping and waiting. That looks bad. If he whistles for his gang, look for my body under the portico. Now he's started toward me. Here's where I take off. Get a load of Mr. M. walk somebody after him on a dark street! There are those who call it running. But I prefer the higher aeronautical term, zooming. My neat imitation, ladies and gentlemen, is flying without looking back. Shucks, it isn't a man at all. It's a woman.

It might be one of those red-headed girl bandits, shooting from both hips. So what! Perhaps I can fever her into a Circean caper. Good evening, little lady. This night is made for romance. "Suffer me to take your hand. Suffer me to cherish you till the dawn is in the sky!" That's just a little something by Edna Millay, but it works in fine here. Aw, it isn't a young girl, at all. It is a waterfront hag on a bat. She hallows: "Hi buddy, how about you and me having a shot of gin?" Wherever I go, it is the same. The ladies give me a rush.

These last three blocks are darkest of all. That looks like the outline of a midget on the second corner. Well, a midget can shoot a pistol as well as a giant. Headline: "Dwarf Slays Tall Pedestrian." How my imagination is working. It's only a water plug. From now on I'm not going to be afraid of anything. Well, not anything much. Naturally, if some thug steps out and says: "Stick 'em up," my heart may beat a little faster. It couldn't beat much faster than it has the last few minutes, not without shaking down a few buildings. All my life I've never learned to relax. Always at tension. Suppose somebody does rush up and press a pistol to my temple. The thing to do is relax. You can call it relaxing, but in my set it is called fainting dead away.

* * *

I once read of an Englishman thwarting a footpad by putting on a bit of side. He called him "My good man," and asked him to drop in at Buckingham palace the next day: "Corking good of you to have stopped me." And walked away, unmolested. That's what I'll do—thwart them by a little high hatting. You know, I'm off on the morrow to join His Grace's regiment in the Sudan. Fawncy seeing you here.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What Is a Mother's Job?

IF YOU'RE a mother, you are going to be startled when you read the following paragraphs.

You're going to say—Why, I didn't know that any other mother felt like this. I thought I was the only one who was having this heartbreaking and unfair experience. Strange — she's actually saying the very thing I have so often said myself. Feeling the same things. It's almost as if she had been eavesdropping—"

Elsie Robinson

Every mother on earth who reads these paragraphs will think that and perhaps weep a few tears of self-pity as she reads.

The letter itself is too long to print. But the story is simple enough—

She isn't very old yet—not quite forty. People say she's lucky. They envy her her nice home, her handsome husband, her two fine children, both of whom are working now in good positions.

"But if they only knew the truth, they wouldn't envy me," she wails. "My children treat me terribly. Do you think it's kind of them to leave me alone all the time after all I have done for them?

"When they were small they loved to be with me—they couldn't take three steps without me. It was 'mother—mother' all the time. I used to think—will they ever be able to do anything without me? But now it is no different—

"Now they show so plainly they don't need me or even want me to come along. Oh, yes, they say they love me and everyone says how sweet they are to me. But actually, I don't mean anything to them. All they think of is to be on the go. They dash in—yell and ask me where their things are—give me a hurried kiss and then go off again.

"They won't take my suggestions as they used to do. They insist on choosing their own clothes. They expect me to sit around and amuse myself. AND IT ISN'T ENOUGH. I WANT TO BE PART OF THEIR LIFE AND I HAVE A RIGHT TO BE. THEY SHOULDN'T SHOVE ME OFF LIKE THIS. I NEVER HAD AN INTEREST OUTSIDE THEM AND NOW THEY ALL HAVE THEIR INTERESTS OUTSIDE ME. IT ISN'T FAIR. SOMETIMES I AM SO DESPERATE I COULD KILL MYSELF."

Yes, every mother will understand that letter—and probably say what cruel, ungrateful children these are. But are they?

Is it the duty of young men and women to "share their lives" with the mother who has loved them long and served them loyally?

Is it up to them to provide her with amusement and interest and social contacts?

Has a mother the right to expect such things of her children when they are making their start in life?

OR IT IS UP TO A MOTHER WHO IS STILL YOUNG AND HEALTHY TO PROVIDE HER OWN AMUSEMENTS AND INTERESTS AND MAKE HER OWN CONTACTS?

AND "HOULD SHE SO LIVE HER LIFE THAT SHE WILL BE PREPARED TO DO THESE THINGS FOR HERSELF WHEN HER CHILDREN HAVE LEFT THE HOME NEST?

What is a mother's duty, anyway? Is it merely to give life? Or is it also to live life? Does a mother have a duty to herself as well as to her children? And should she—or shouldn't she—be excused if she shirks that duty in the name of "mother love"?

What do YOU think?

Just Folks

The Missing Luxuries

We sit and fret and whine and fuss
O'er comforts now denied to us,
All joys, beyond the slightest doubt,
Our parents had to do without.

At worst, the life we live is rich
Compared with the conditions which
Our fathers and our mothers knew
In Eighteen Hundred Ninety-Two.

Although a small boy then was I
I can recall that cake and pie
Were treats not regularly served
Except when birthdays were observed.

No motor car, no telephone
Was by our kindly parents known.
They were content the cold to brave

My mother laughed and sang and made
A happy home wherein we played,
Though times were then exceeding bad
And little money father had.

So when I hear men fret and fume
And walk the town to scatter gloom,
"The things you miss," I want to shout,
"Your parents got along without."

No Time to "Throw Votes Away"

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

SOME TIME AGO Heywood Broun, the popular columnist, who is a Socialist, wrote that "this is a good year to throw your vote away." This is a year that no one can afford to throw his or her vote away.

Were nothing involved in the coming election but a change in office it would not matter whether or not a vote were thrown away. If conditions governmentally were not desperately bad it would not matter.

What Broun was aiming at, of course, was to persuade the reader to vote for Norman Thomas or some other candidate—if there be any—rather than vote for either Hoover or Roosevelt.

Mr. Broun says frankly that were he forced to vote for one or the other of these he, unhesitatingly, would vote for Roosevelt. There are many like him who feel that conditions almost force them to make this choice.

The brilliant essayist admits that there is not the slightest chance in the world to elect Norman Thomas. A vote for him is a "vote thrown away," according to Broun's admission.

But it is something more than that—it is a vote indirectly for Herbert Hoover.

* * *

Wall Street for Hoover

The important gentlemen on Wall Street—with all its ramifications—will not "throw their votes away," albeit they are not enamored of Mr. Hoover. They know that he has been a failure; that his ineptitude has been disastrous even to the element to which he intends to low, and there are scores of men it would have preferred for the Republican nomination.

But it is Hoover or Roosevelt—and it will cast its vote for Hoover, because it knows he is sympathetic toward the policies of high finance that have brought on the depression. And it knows that Roosevelt is not.

Anyone who is a Socialist, or who believes that our present system has gone to the bowwows and is not worth reforming, ought to vote for Norman Thomas. He is an able, cultured gentleman without horns, and he believes scores of things I believe, and his election, even, would not mean the end of civilization.

But he cannot be elected.

To vote for him is to "throw one's vote away," in the language of Broun.

* * *

"Throwing Votes" Only Aids Hoover

The Hoover concept of government, the Hoover ineptitude cannot be put behind us if people throw their votes away. They are given the vote that they may put men out of office whose regime in office has meant tragedy. The present regime has been tragic enough.

There is just one way to continue this tragic failure in government, and that is for the people who are opposed to Hoover—as Mr. Broun clearly is—to divide their votes among third, fourth and fifth candidates. The one hope of Hoover is to split the opposition.

* * *

Public Has Much to Gain at Polls

There have been times when the people would not gain no matter which of the two old parties won. This is not one of them.

The platform adopted by the party that nominated Roosevelt is the most progressive we have had in years. It promises reforms of evils that have brought our present plight upon us.

The big thing before the people this year is to take advantage of the opportunity to rid themselves of an administration throughout which there has been more human misery than this land has ever known.

* * *

Time Not Ripe for Socialist Vote

There is just one hope in the near future for the Socialists and the Norman Thomases. If the Democrats are put in power, with Roosevelt as President, and there is no rectifying of these political, economic and social wrongs under which millions suffer, it will be evidence strong enough that nothing can be expected of either of the old parties.

Should Roosevelt in office fail, after Hoover has failed; should Roosevelt register the will of the powerful few instead of the average man as Hoover has, four years hence there would be such a rush to Socialism, or something much more extreme, as could not be checked.

The American people are not yet ready to scrap our institutional forms and experiment with an entirely new order. They first want to know that the trouble is with our institutions and not merely with the men charged with their operation.

There is but one way to find out—to give the Democrats, who have opposed these Hooven nolicies that have wrecked the prosperity of the nation, a chance to prove that their own policies actually will mean prosperity and equal rights.

* * *

More Discontent Than Ever Before

It ought to be enough to the millions who are in distress to observe that the element they feel is responsible for the collapse is against Roosevelt and for Hoover.

If the victims of this element divide, Mr. Hoover has the chance to pass through the divided ranks into the White House for four years more.

It is inevitable that the Socialists will increase their strength this year and that the Communists will increase theirs. There is more disgust with our institutions and our social system among more men today than ever before in history.

Under our laws men who feel that way can vote for Communism if they will—but this would not be an intelligent protest. It would not put a Communist in power—we all know that. And without intending anything so foolish and unfair as to associate Communism with Socialism, voting for Thomas this year will not elect him.

Unless you are convinced that Socialism is what you want, that you are through with our institutions, an intelligent protest must take the form of a vote for Roosevelt.
